ADOLPHUSTOWN RURAL SCHOOL FAIR

A very successful rural school fair was held at Dorland on Wednesday, Oct. 7th. The fair was not as large as the first fair held a year ago, as South Fredericksburgh schools which then took part went to Sillsville on Friday, and only four schools in Adolphustown competed. However, as much prize money was paid out at Dorland as at any school fair held in the county this fall, and every child who entered exhibits that showed care received a prize. There are rumors that the farmers of Adolphustown will co-operate and hold a Township Fair in connection with the Rural School Fair in 1915. The Adolphustown Women's Institute served a most enjoyable lunch.

The Red Cross Society

The thanks of the Red Cross Society are due to the following merchants for the generous donation of good, new clothing, and goods for the boxes sent to Montreal for the Belgian Relief. Wilson & Bro., J. J. Haines, The Robinson Co., Doozee & Co., M. Maker, J. L. Boyes, T. B. Wallace, and to the general public for responding so generously to the appeal.

The following letter speaks for itself:—
Red Cross Society, Napanee.

Dear Mrs. Miller:—We are in receipt of your letter of 9th inst and also of 10 cases of clothing which you so kindly sent us. We are chiefly grateful to you for this help to our work and we thank you very heartily for same. The clothing will undoubtedly prove very valuable to my countrymen who are at present in such misery, caused by this terrible war. The Canadians are certainly giving a hearty response to our appeal and we can never forget them.

Yours very truly,
HECTOR PRUD'HOMME,

Hon. Treasurer, relief work for the victims of the war in Belgium.

Four more cases have been sent since and more will go as clothing, etc., is donated.

WIFE OF MAJOR C. P. TEMPLETON, OF BRANDON, DIES IN GRACE
HOSPITAL FROM TYPHOID.

When Major C. P. Templeton of the Army Medical Corps left Valcartier two weeks ago for the front with the first Canadian contingent, his wife and little daughter came down to Valcartier from Brandon, Man., to say good-by to the departing physician. Saturday morning Mrs. Templeton died at Grace Hospital, Toronto, from typhoid fever, contracted while at Valcartier.

Major Templeton was a prominent young surgeon in Brandon, and when the war broke out promptly enlisted for service abroad. His wife and two-year-old daughter, Margaret, followed him to the camp and spent several days there. On her way home Mrs. Templeton intended to spend a few days with her sister-in-law, Mrs. John M. McIntosh, 84 Clara street, Toronto. A few days after her arrival here she contracted typhoid fever and was rushed to Grace Hospital, but all efforts to save her life were unavailing.

NEW LIBRARY BOOKS

History is being made in Europe
every day now more rapidly than ever before and the more we know about the countries involved in the deadly struggle, the better will we appreciate the different phases of the war.
The directors of the public library recognized this fact and have spared no expense to obtain all the latest books dealing with those countries.
There were a number of excellent books upon the shelves already and the following volumes fresh from the press have been received during the past week.

An Army officer in Japan.
France of the French.
Motoring in the Balkans.
The New World of the South.
The romance of Australian History.
The Royal Navy.
Canada in 20th Century.
Along France's River of Romance.
The France of to-day.
Holland.
War and Waste.
Paris.
Along French By-ways.
Chateau and Country life in France.
My first years as a Frenchwoman.
Canadian Nights.
In the Heart of the Vosges.
The Secrets of the German War Office.
The Mongols in Russia.

The amount of ignorance concerning the European nations engaged in this awful conflict is quite unpardonable when there are within the reach of everyone the latest and best books giving all the information required and that too in a readable and at-

been so far eclipsed by the European paid to either Villa or Caranza but many startling disclosures of those in

also been added.

NOT BEATEN YET.

Twenty-Four of Antwerps Forts Still Hold Out.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — The Times' correspondent in Belgium under date of Sunday says:

Twenty-four of the Antwerp forts were still holding out to-day in the face of a continuous bombardment. Last night over twenty blazing fires could be distinguished from afar in different parts of the city.

The city itself and the remaining defences are in the hands of the Germans who have signalized their arrival by a demand for a war levy of $100,000,000.

"Antwerp was not seriously damaged by the German bombardment," says The Chronicle's Amsterdam correspondent. "Only the suburb of Berchem and the southeast quarter of the town suffered badly."

"Long after they had been evacuated by the Belgians the Germans continued firing on and around the ruins of the blown-up forts. They feared mines and hoped thus to destroy them. Near the southern suburbs the ground had been extensively mined by the Belgians, but the Germans were warned by trailers from within the city and took care to avoid the danger zone."

"On Thursday morning the retreating troops from Antwerp passed on their flight to Ostend no fewer than 600 motor cars filled with soldiers who had already passed through the town. The intention was to reach Ostend by forced marches, and the soldiers were relieved of their knapsacks, which were carried in the vans. Motor buses from London carried footsore troops who had fallen out of line. Then came columns of machine guns drawn by dogs."

NOT OVER BY CHRISTMAS

War Will See More Than One Christmas Thinks Curzon.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — Earl Curzon Kedleston, formerly Viceroy of India in a speech made at a war meet at Harrow School last night, said that the taking of Antwerp was a liberate part of the German plan.

"Germany has taken Antwerp fortify it, to keep it, to make a grand port of it, to use it as a jumping-off place for her future attempts upon this country. It is temporary occupation unless we make it so."

The speaker added that by fortifying Antwerp Germany would secure a grip on the whole of Belgium, and Holland play her will, and then set down to her main object — the destruction of this country. He said Britain was in for a long war, and declared he was shocked that so people should think the hostilities would be over by Christmas. In opinion more than one Christmas would roll by before the ending hostilities. In conclusion he advised his hearers not to begin to divide the German Empire "before you have got hold of it."

Britain's need of more fighting men was emphasized by the announcement last night that the infantry standard, which had been raised to check the great rush of recruits at the outbreak of the war, has again been lowered. The minimum height for recruits, which formerly was five feet six inches, has been placed at five feet four inches, and chest measurement from 35 1-2 to 34 1-2 inches.

An appeal has been issued in Glasgow for 2,000 recruits to replace the naval men interned in Holland.

PARIS IS SCARED.

Two Visits of German Bomb-Droppers In 24 Hours Causes Panic.

PARIS, Oct. 13. — Paris was attacked again yesterday by a German bomb-dropping aeroplane, the second aerial raid over the city within twenty-four hours, and as a result of the flight the population is in terror and is demanding that the French aerial blockade be strengthened.

The ease with which the German aviator penetrated to a point over Paris and dropped two bombs on the Northern Railroad station, soon after Saturday's raid by twelve machines which scattered twenty bombs, killing three and wounding fourteen persons, has roused the people to a realization that the overhead danger is constant and unpreventable by the French Aviation Corps.

Following Sunday morning's raid by two German aeroplanes, when the Cathedral of Notre Dame was struck by one of the falling bombs, all of the aerial craft defending Paris was made ready for instant action. Despite these preparations a German aeroplane swooped over Paris at 9.15 yesterday morning and dropped twenty bombs between two crowded railroad trains which were leaving the Northern Railroad station.

FRIDAY.
Hon. W. J. Roche, Minister of the Interior, arrived in Winnipeg yesterday morning after a lengthy sojourn at the Mayo Hospital in Minnesota. The barn and contents of Ross McLennan, of Bruce Township, were entirely destroyed by fire, caused by lightning. The building was filled with the season's crop.

Rev. E. E. Sayles resigned the pastorate of the Oshawa Baptist Church. He went to Oshawa two and a half years ago, after graduating from McMaster University.

The electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway, London's road to Lake Erie, will not be delayed on account of the war, and rehabilitation work is being rushed ahead.

A man, later identified as William Burbridge, Malton, committed suicide at Crewson's Corners, between Acton and Rockwood, by throwing himself in front of a Grand Trunk passenger train.

Wilfrid Laverdure, a long-term prisoner at the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, was instantly killed yesterday morning by falling from a pile of lumber to the ground, a distance of 20 feet.

P. Corkey's barn, near Harwood, with the season's crop, implements, calves, chickens and hogs, was burned, entailing a severe loss, for he had only a small insurance. It is supposed that children playing around a straw stack started the fire.

SATURDAY.
The Czar personally inspected the fortress of Ossowitz on Thursday and thanked the defenders for their valorous resistance against the Germans. While walking the G. T. R. tracks at Brampton, W. Burbridge, of Malton, was killed by a passing train. He had been mentally depressed for some time.

Several cases of plague have been reported at Salonika, and as a result all steamers scheduled to sail from Genoa for that port have suspended their departure.

Dr. T. C. Lapp has been appointed coroner at Cobourg. Dr. Elliot, who has held the office for some time, is with the first Canadian expeditionary force.

A German fishing vessel has been blown up by a mine in the Langeland belt, north of the coast of Denmark. The captain was killed, but the rest of the crew were saved.

Miss Julia Brown, of Somerville, Ont., was assaulted yesterday morning by an unknown young man. Miss Brown is 65 years old, and was brutally beaten and robbed of a small sum of money.

Hogs valued at thousands of dollars were slaughtered yesterday in Malden township by special Government experts sent to check the worst outbreak of cholera that has occurred in twenty years.

TUESDAY.
Arrangements have been made by the City of Regina with the Bank of Montreal for a loan of $320,000, to be used for construction of improvements.

Mrs. Florrie Nellie Jones, aged 21, wife of a rancher near Merritt, B.C., was accidentally shot on Sunday by her husband while both were out shooting.

W. R. Arnold, general manager of the Dominion Trust Co. of Vancouver, was killed yesterday while putting away a gun with which he had been on a shooting expedition.

... Germans were warned by trallers from within the city and took care to avoid the danger zone.

"On Thursday morning the retreating troops from Antwerp passed on their flight to Ostend no fewer than 600 motor cars filled with soldiers who had already passed through the town. The intention was to reach Ostend by forced marches, and the soldiers were relieved of their knapsacks, which were carried in the vans. Motor buses from London carried footsore troops who had fallen out of line. Then came columns of machine guns drawn by dogs."

Altogether 22,000 British and Belgian soldiers are interned at different points in Holland. About 1,500 of these men are British marines, who were driven over the boundary. This statement has been made by the Dutch War Office, according to a despatch from the Rotterdam correspondent of The Times.

TO RAM ZEPPELINS.

British Aviators Pledge Themselves To Go To Almost Certain Death.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — It was announced by Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, at a patriotic meeting in Kingsway Hall here Saturday night that "if Zeppelins raid London all the members of the British flying corps have pledged themselves to dash their machines right through the airships even if both are brought to earth."

"Anyone passing through London," continued the speaker, "can see that we expect a visit by German aircraft."

"The British aeroplanes have proved to be more than equal to those of the German Government," says the Paris correspondent of The Times. "Especially success has been scored with the new type of British aeroplane called the 'Chaser,' which is capable of developing a speed of 150 miles an hour, and which can rise from the ground at a very sharp angle."

SAN GIULIANO NEAR DEATH.

Passing of Italian Foreign Minister May Alter Situation.

ROME, Oct. 13.—Minister of Foreign Affairs Di San Giuliano has received his last sacrament and the attending physicians say death is imminent.

Marquis Antonio Di San Giuliano was born in Catania, Dec. 9, 1855. He was appointed senator March 1, 1905. He has served as ambassador in London and Paris several times. He was postmaster-general from March 1899 to June of 1900 and was Minister of Foreign Affairs in the Cabinet, headed by Fortis, from Dec. 24, 1905, till Feb. 8, 1906. He was again Secretary of Foreign Affairs from the date just mentioned until March 31, 1911, this time in the Cabinet headed by Luzzatti, and again Secretary of the same Department from the last mentioned date till March of the present year in the Cabinet headed by Giolitti, and was again appointed Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the present Cabinet, headed by Salandra.

San Giuliano is strongly pro-German and his death may result in sharp change in Italy's position.

Ghent Citizens Flee.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 13. — A despatch from Ghent states that the skirmishing which took place Sunday was more southerly and westerly than it was on Saturday. A Zeppelin appeared over Audenarde Sunday and proceeded in the direction of Brussels.

Five hundred Germans encamped at Sottenhem have destroyed the railway bridges at Audenrove, St. Marie, Lierre and Grammont.

The inhabitants of Ghent are commencing their flight toward the Dutch frontier.

Three Lives Lost.

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—Three men were killed and two injured in an accident which occurred about eleven o'clock Sunday morning on the National Transcontinental construction work northwest of La Tuque. The scene of the accident is remote from here, the nearest communication point being Harvey Junction, where the National Transcontinental line crosses the Canadian Northern on the way to Quebec. One of the men killed was Mr. A. H. Johnston, a railway engineer, of Westmount.

Russian Campaign Veiled.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 13.—The battle which began Saturday on the western border of Poland equals the battle in France on the Aisne in extent and may equal it in length of time. The numbers of the opposing armies are as great as in the western theatre of war.

Semi-official intimations that secrecy is needed for the success of the Russian operations have been published and no information as to the tremendous conflict now taking place has been given out.

Prussian Losses 211,000.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The forty-four lists of losses in the Prussian army which have been published, contain a total of 211,000 killed, wounded and missing, according to a Reuter despatch from Amsterdam.

The list do not include losses among the Bavarians, Saxons and Wurttembergers.

Cholera Spreading in Austria.

PRZEMYSL IS RELIEVED

Russians Forced to Give Up Siege of Galician City.

Fighting Has Begun Along Vistula River Near Warsaw, According to Russian Advices—Gen. Rennenkampf Is Now Before Koenigsberg Menacing Danzig-Thorn Line After Weeks of Hard Fighting.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The following official statement was issued last night by the chief of the general staff in Petrograd:

"On Oct. 11 fighting began on the left bank of the Vistula, in the direction of Ivangorod and Warsaw.

"There is no change at other points on our front.

"Detachments of Russian cavalry, having passed through the defiles in the Carpathian Mountains, have emerged into the plains of Hungary."

An earlier statement announced the abandonment of the siege of Przemyśl for strategic reasons.

From the east came tidings of a decided reversal in form, the despatches both from Vienna and Petrograd indicating that the Austrian army at Przemyśl, so often reported surrounded, hopelessly outclassed and on the verge of surrender, had, with the aid of reinforcements turned on the Russians and forced them to retreat.

The first news of this claim emanated during the morning from the Austrian capital. It was followed later in the way by what purports to be a Petrograd admission that the Russians had abandoned the siege of Przemyśl for strategic reasons, with the object of drawing up a new line against the Austro-German army in other points of Galicia.

Whatever be the truth of the situation the Russians have been claiming an unbroken series of victories in their sweep through Galicia, and the coincidence of yesterday's despatches, supplemented as they were by more circumstantial accounts from Vienna of a vigorous Austro-German offensive seemed to presage important news.

The most reliable report indicates that Gen. Rennenkampf is now before Koenigsberg, menacing the Danzig-Thorn line of forts. These names are familiar and were featured daily some weeks ago when the Russian advance first drove into East Prussia. But Gen. Von Hindenburg won a victory at Allenstein, which forced back the Czar's legions. It has taken weeks of persistent fighting to recover the lost ground, the last phase of this movement developing in a series of operations in the Russian Province of Suwalki, where the Germans suffered heavily. Their armies have recovered poise again, however, and are offering a stubborn resistance all along this front.

The Russian centre has made slight but progressive advances toward Breslau, and are gradually forcing their opponents back. On the Vistula German arms appear to be successful, and the Russians are fighting desperately to affect a passage of that river. In fact, the situation in Galicia and southwestern Poland cannot be judged accurately because of the strict censorship. But desperate fighting is under way and the result appears to be very doubtful, with the advantage turning to the Austro-German forces.

The official German statement of yesterday has the following to say of the eastern operations:

Great Battle of Belgium Will Extend Over 300-Mile Line.

After Taking Antwerp German Forces Are Making a Desperate Effort to Get to Ostend and Are Reported to Have Occupied Ghent—Activity Is Reported Near Verdun and Soissons on Line in France.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Both sides are bending every energy for the campaign that will decide the fate of Ostend. The possession of this port would be of immense advantage to Germany, of much greater significance than the capture of Antwerp. To drive the assault home the Germans are undoubtedly bringing up every available man, both from Antwerp and such points as their centre and left can spare. Opposing these will be an equally allied army, made up largely, it is rumored, of fresh British, Indian and Canadian troops. The battle may open at any moment and will probably be long and bloody. A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says a troop of German cavalry entered Ghent yesterday morning and the German colors were hoisted over the Town Hall.

Chilans have also arrived at Selzaete, a short distance from Ghent, and the commander announced that 4,000 soldiers must be quartered in the village.

The whole German front is preparing to take the offensive again along

AN GIULIANO NEAR DEATH.

Sing of Italian Foreign Minister May Alter Situation.

OME, Oct. 13.—Minister of Foreign Affairs Di San Giuliano has read his last sacrament and the attending physicians say death is imminent. Marquis Antonio Di San Giuliano born in Catania, Dec. 9, 1852, was appointed senator March 4, 5. He has served as ambassador London and Paris several times. was postmaster-general from May 1899 to June of 1900 and was later of Foreign Affairs in the cabinet, headed by Fortis, from Dec. 1905, till Feb. 8, 1906. He was Secretary of Foreign Affairs at the date just mentioned until March 31, 1911, this time in the cabinet headed by Luzzatti, and again Secretary of the same Department at the last mentioned date till the end of the present year in the cabinet headed by Giolitti, and was appointed Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the present Cabinet, headed by Salandra.

San Giuliano is strongly pro-German and his death may result in a change in Italy's position.

Ghent Citizens Flee.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 13.—A detachment from Ghent states that the fighting which took place Sunday morning more southerly and westerly than it was on Saturday. A Zeppelin appeared over Audenarde Sunday and proceeded in the direction of Brussels. Five hundred Germans encamped at Sottenhem have destroyed the way bridges at Audenarde, St. Lieke, and Grammont. The inhabitants of Ghent are commencing their flight toward the Dutch border.

Three Lives Lost.

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—Three men were killed and two injured in an accident which occurred about eleven o'clock Sunday morning on the National Transcontinental construction line northwest of La Tuque. The cause of the accident is remote from the scene, the nearest communication being Harvey Junction, where the National Transcontinental line crosses the Canadian Northern on the way to Quebec. One of the men killed was Mr. A. H. Johnston, a railway engineer, of Westmount.

Russian Campaign Veiled.

ETROGRAD, Oct. 13.—The battle which began Saturday on the eastern border of Poland equals the battle in France on the Aisne in extent, and may equal it in length of time. The numbers of the opposing armies are as great as in the western theatre of war. Semi-official intimations that secrecy is needed for the success of the Russian operations have been published and no information as to the serious conflict now taking place has been given out.

Prussian Losses 211,000.

ONDON, Oct. 13.—The forty-fourth of losses in the Prussian army which have been published, contain a total of 211,000 killed, wounded, missing, according to a Reuters dispatch from Amsterdam. The list does not include losses among the Bavarians, Saxons and Flemish.

Cholera Spreading In Austria.

ARIS, Oct. 13.—A Havas Agency dispatch from Venice says that 27 cases of cholera were reported in Austria on Oct. 12.

ing their opponents back. On the Vistula German arms appear to be successful, and the Russians are fighting desperately to affect a passage of that river. In fact, the situation in Galicia and southwestern Poland cannot be judged accurately because of the strict censorship. But desperate fighting is under way and the result appears to be very doubtful, with the advantage turning to the Austro-German forces.

The official German statement of yesterday has the following to say of the eastern operations:

"From Vienna we have reports that in the face of heavy destruction Russia has given up the attempt to take the besieged fortress of Przemyel.

"The Austrian army defeated six Russian divisions near Lancut and routed one Cossack division east of Nymano."

MEINSELF UND GOTT.

Wilhelm Issues Another Proclamation of His Divine Rights.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—It is asserted that the Kaiser has sent the following proclamation to his army in East Prussia:

"The Holy Spirit has descended upon me. As the German Emperor, I am the instrument of the Most High. I am the sword and the rod. Woe and death be unto those who resist my will and who do not believe in my mission. Woe and death unto all cowards and enemies. The German God demands their destruction. God, through me, commands you to fulfil His will."

Advise Retirement To Cellars.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The only notice of the arrival of hostile aircraft in the neighborhood of the Thames and the Medway, says the Mayor of Gravesend, in a proclamation posted yesterday, will be the firing of guns from the defences. The notice adds:

"Persons seeking to gratify their curiosity will do so at their own risk. When firing is heard the people should immediately take shelter in the lower rooms or cellars of their buildings."

Heavy Loss In Explosion.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—A hundred people were killed or injured in Lisbon, Portugal, Saturday night by an explosion at the Lisbon Gas Works, according to a despatch to Reuters Telegram Co. from the Portuguese capital. The explosion caused a fire in which the staff of the gas works was trapped. Several tram car passengers and pedestrians were among the victims.

Belfort Fears Bombardment.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Daily Mail's Amsterdam correspondent says Berlin newspapers are distributing posters announcing that the civil population is leaving Belfort (a French fortified town in the so-called territory of Belfort, in fear of a bombardment).

British, Indian and Canadian troops. The battle may open at any moment and will probably be long and bloody.

A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says a troop of German cavalry entered Ghent yesterday morning and the German colors were hoisted over the Town Hall.

Uhlans have also arrived at Selzette, a short distance from Ghent, and the commander announced that 4,000 soldiers must be quartered in the village.

The whole German front is preparing to take the offensive again along a battle line no less than 300 miles long.

German cavalry has advanced within thirty miles of Ostend; Ghent is threatened by the invaders; Uhlans, screening a heavy Prussian force, have been encountered all through the territory west of Lille.

The first activity of any importance on the centre of the opposing armies that has occurred in some days took place yesterday north of Soissons and east and southwest of Verdun. The French field guns opened on the German trenches in that region and kept up a steady play on their opponents for several hours. Then the French infantry advanced with a rush, and there was a hurculean combat for possession of the trenches. The Germans fought with their usual determination, but were compelled to cede ground at certain points. North of Soissons the French won positions of value. The enemy was also thrown back from elevated posts before Verdun, where preparations were under way by the Germans to essay a new artillery attack on the fortress.

Between Lassigny and Roye, where the allies won considerable ground Sunday, the Germans fought with great valor yesterday in an effort to retrieve the positions lost. But allied reinforcements had come up in the night, and the advantage of Sunday was pushed home, making an appreciable inroad into territory held by the Kaiser's men.

The capture of Apremont by the French is regarded as a great tactical victory. This point covers the German line of communications into Lorraine and would be an effective obstacle to a retreat of the German forces now at St. Mihiel.

In Northern France and Southern Belgium great events are transpiring. Cavalry engagements continue to be the outstanding feature of the fighting, large forces of mounted troops participating on both sides.

French Statement.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Continuation of the activity in the north of France, and repulses of the Germans between Lassigny and Roye are reported in the official statement given out yesterday afternoon by the War Office. The statement follows:

"On our left wing the cavalry engagements continue in the region of La Bassée, Estiers and Bazbrouck. Between Arras and the Oise the enemy has attempted numerous attacks which have been repulsed, notably between Lassigny and Roye.

"In the centre we have made some progress on the plateaus on the right bank of the River Aisne, before Soissons and to the east and southeast of Verdun.

"On our right wing, in the Vosges, the enemy has made a night attack in the region of Bam de Sapt, to the north of St. Die, but repulsed."

"The flag captured yesterday belonged to the 6th Regiment of Pomeranian Infantry, No. 49, of the 2nd Prussian Army Corps.

"The fusilier brigade was engaged on the 9th and until the morning of the 10th against German forces, which it repulsed, inflicting serious losses. Two hundred Germans were killed and 50 made prisoners. The French losses were 9 killed, 9 wounded and one man missing.

"In Belgium, according to the latest information received from Antwerp, the Germans occupy only the outskirts of the city, the 24 forts on both banks of the Escaut river resisting energetically.

"In Russia the battle on the East Prussian frontier continues with desperate fighting. To the northwest of Lyck the Germans are in retreat, having destroyed the bridges in Southern Poland between Ivangorod and Sandomir. Artillery duels are in progress with the enemy's columns that have reached the Vistula."

The following official statement was given out last night:

"There is nothing in particular to report.

"Violent attacks have occurred along the front. We have gained ground at some points and we have not lost any at any place."

Germans Claim Victory.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 13.—An official announcement from military headquarters in Berlin says that the German cavalry defeated a French cavalry division near Hazebrouck.

The fighting along the front is still without definite result. In the western theatre of war, all attacks on the First and Tenth Corps have been repulsed.

Story of a Church Sign.

In New York city alone more than 150 electric signs are used by the churches. Perhaps the earliest illuminated church sign was a cross placed over St. Augustine chapel, in lower Manhattan, nearly forty years ago. Again and again Bowery mission and settlement house workers have met men and women who have testified that the flaming cross on St. Augustine's was the instrument that turned them from evil lives.

How Black Haytian Plucked the Cigar From Mouth of Canadian.

Certain Canadians from whose cheeks the tropical tan has not yet faded are un-Booker T. Washingtonish enough to wish that the colored ruler of Hayti had, like Pharaoh, hardened his heart and refused to pay that little item of $62,000. This was the bill rendered recently by Great Britain for the destruction of a Britisher's sawmill in one of the perennial revolutions. The dusky potentate who rules at Port au Prince was informed that he had until just six o'clock to come across with the coin. Otherwise, the cruiser Suffolk would put one of King George's officers in charge of the custom house. After a very brief deliberation, Hayti's Government touched the National Bank for the amount and paid over the gold.

These Canadian tropical trippers who took in the sable isle on the Panama cruise, have a grudge against Hayti and its native population, hence their expressed wish that the President would dare attempt to beard the Lion.

Hayti, the negro republic, is a land where the white man gets off the sidewalk to let his superior black brother pass. Here the brash colored man is at his brashiest, and gets away with it every time. Negro policemen back him up. Negro soldiers back them up, and higher up still are ebony officials and an Ethiopian President.

Notwithstanding Hayti is a popular port of call and here the Canadian contingent spent a day — and what a day!

One of the number was walking up a main thoroughfare with a friend enjoying a perfecto, when suddenly a native sprang out from an alleyway, grabbed the torch from the gentleman's astonished mouth and made off with it.

Just at this time another Canadian was haggling with one of the vociferous crowd of cabbies.

The avaricious Jehu demanded $5 for his fare, whereupon the passenger beckoned a policeman. Clutching the $2 proffered to the driver, this guardian of the peace dashed off with it, followed by the infuriated cabby.

More serious than funny was the predicament that another party from the same ship got into when, after viewing the old cathedral they turned to find the door locked and themselves confronted by a naked dirk in the hands of a ransom-demanding guide.

Another remarkable insect found in Mexico is the Elater fire-fly, which the Indians use as miniature torches. The men fasten them to their ankles in going through the forest, and the women wear them in their hair under a thin gauze veil.

Tiny little cages are constructed in which three or four are kept for lighting purposes. The insects congregate by the thousands in many forest trees, and, as if by preconcerted agreement, simultaneously flash their lights, then darken them and flash them again.

The Silent Trombones.

Hans Bruder was one of the two trombone players in the Apollo orchestra. On the evening of a special concert, in the course of which an overture that contained a trombone solo was to be played, Hans received an urgent invitation to attend a small party in a neighboring town. Mindful of his responsible position in the concert, he hesitated for a long time before accepting, but he was an easy-going, pleasure-loving soul, and an idea dawned on him—he would send a substitute to the concert in his place.

For the position of substitute he picked out a friend who could not play the trombone, but Hans assured him that skill was not necessary; it would be enough if he should puff out his cheeks and move the slide in perfect time with the other trombone player. Then Hans left him in charge of the instrument and hurried for the train.

The substitute went to the hall. The overture began. After a wild burst of music and a crash of drums came deadly silence. The frantic conductor stared at the substitute and waved his baton. Every head in the orchestra turned to see what was the trouble. But not a sound came from the puffing, pumping trombone players.

The other man also had sent a substitute.

ENERGY IN ATOMS

Likened to Infinite Power in an Infinitesimal Space.

EACH ONE IS A TINY WORLD.

If All Should Burst Their Walls at Once the Universe Would Dissolve In an Instant—A Magic Force That Science Is Seeking to Control.

Do you remember when Aladdin bud, at last, got down into the cave under the tree, what inexpressible marvels he found around him? But among all the riches of the cave there was only one little dust-covered thing that was really worth the risk he had run, because it alone was truly novel and unlike anything else in the world—the necromantic lamp that had the genie for its slave. With that in his possession the poor boy was more powerful than all the monarchs in the world—provided that he knew how to handle the lamp, and that knowledge came to him by accident.

I have just been pondering over some statements by Jean Becquerel, the French physicist, about the contents of the atoms of which matter is composed, and they have forcibly recalled Aladdin's adventures to my mind. The interior of an atom is a little world infinitely more marvelous than the cave that contained the magic lamp, and it conceals powers incomparably greater than that of Aladdin's good genie.

To the scientific imagination the inside of an atom is inversely as wondrous as the starry heavens. It is infinite power packed into infinitesimal space. That, of course, is an exaggeration; but this is a case in which one has to speak in imposing figures, because the facts surpass all ordinary experience.

"The atom," says Jean Becquerel, "is a closed world, or almost closed, and it is that fact which constitutes its individuality."

This "closed world" of the atom is so small that if we could increase the powers of our microscopes a thousandfold we could not render it visible, and yet that minute speck of matter incloses a "solar system" as elaborate as that of the great sun with its planets, and keeps locked up there an energy so colossal that the plainest statements of fact that can be made about it seem like wild dreams.

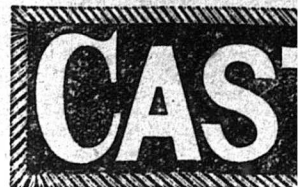

"The emanation from radium" (a substance whose atoms spontaneously give out at least a part of their energy) "is capable of liberating 2,500,000 times more energy than the most violent chemical reaction known."

The world within the atom ordinarily behaves as if it had no concern with the world outside. It is sufficient unto itself. It is a little medieval China, with closed ports and insurmountable walls all round. Still, a very few atoms, like those of radium, have a tendency to communicate with the outer world by a kind of explosion.

If all atoms should burst their walls simultaneously the whole universe would be dissolved in an instant.

The atoms that do disintegrate pass from change to change. Within their limits the foundations of matter are broken up; the distinctions of the fundamental elements are confounded; things lose their nature and their

BLOOD ATONEMENT FOR ADAMIC SIN

Without the Shedding of Blood There Is No Remission of Sin.

Modern Tendency To Deny the Necessity For Sin Atonement—Impossible For Jews Properly Observe the Atonement Day Jewish Hopes Centered In Messiah's Kingdom.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Oct. 4.—Pastor Russell's text was, "The life of the flesh in the blood: a I have given it you upon the tar, to make a tonement of your souls; for is the blood that maketh an atonement for soul." — Leviticus 17:11.

The discourse began with a declaration that ours is a day

ous crowd of cabbies.
The avaricious Jehu demanded $5 for his fare, whereupon the passenger beckoned a policeman. Clutching the $2 proffered to the driver, this guardian of the peace dashed off with it, followed by the infuriated cabby.

More serious than funny was the predicament that another party from the same ship got into when, after viewing the old cathedral they turned to find the door locked and themselves confronted by a naked dirk in the hands of a ransom-demanding guide.

"Why doesn't the steamship company police this wharf?" angrily asked one passenger who had been jostled by some Haytiens.

"It's a wonder (pointing out over the harbor) that that dinky Yankee gunboat of yours wouldn't do something to keep this place in order," retorted the steamship officer.

All visitors were disgusted with the filth of Port au Prince and the lawless disorder of its negro population, one of the Canadian squad commemo-rating his impressions in verse.

MEXICAN MARVELS.

Tiny Dolls, Dressed Fleas and Firefly Flashlights Amaze Visitors.

Travelers and tourists in Mexico are invariably attracted by the wonderful skill and ingenuity displayed by the Indians in the making of miniature objects which they offer for sale. The little dolls, for instance, of Cuernavaca, 1-2 inch tall, and dressed in finely embroidered raiment, are the admiration of every-one who sees them.

But perhaps the most wonderful of all are the tiny dressed fleas which may be bought in Mexico City. They are all mounted in small boxes, which are little more than 1-4 inch in dimension. Here are a bride and bridegroom, the former with her bridal veil and orange blossoms, and the latter with his Prince Albert coat and silk hat. Ballet dancers dressed in true Spanish dancing costumes, bull fighters in full regalia, and water-carriers with their water jugs are also represented among the dressed fleas of Mexico City.

Some further interesting facts regarding Mexican insects are related in The National Geographic Magazine. It appears that many of the Indian colors are made from Mexican insects while one of the most remarkable of the many curious foods eaten by the natives is made from the eggs of a species of marsh fly. This fly deposits its eggs in incredible quantities upon flags and rushes. The eggs are then gathered and made into cakes which are sold in the markets. These little cakes are somewhat like brick-bats, and the Indians enjoy a meal of them with as good a stomach as white people enjoy cheese. The eggs resemble the fine fish roe, and when mixed with corn meal and fowl eggs form a staple article of diet, particularly during Lent.

The insects themselves, which are about the size of a housefly, are captured, pounded into a paste, boiled in corn husks, and in this form are eaten.

STUCK TO HIS FAITH. Anyhow It Paid the Young Prussian Not to Change It.

A king of Prussia who reigned about the beginning of last century was noted for his geniality, and often in the course of his walks through the streets would enter into conversation with his subjects.

One day he met a young man and asked him what his faith was. The youth, who was somewhat of a wag, answered, smiling, "I believe what my tailor believes." The king entered pleasantly into the joke and then asked again, "And what does your tailor believe in?" "Your majesty," replied the young man, "he believes that he will never get the 30 marks which I owe him, and I believe it also."

The king laughed heartily at the outspoken and unrestrained way in which he had answered him, and then gave him 30 marks. "Now, then, you can pay your tailor and so change his faith." The young man fancied, however, that he could use the money for a better purpose, and the tailor naturally went unpaid.

Not long afterward the king met the same youth, who, as he saw his majesty approaching, tried to escape down a side street. The king had, however, espied him and called after him. The youth, somewhat crestfallen and abashed, approached his majesty, who at once asked him if he had paid his tailor. A smile passed over the young man's face as he replied, "Your majesty, I could not change my faith for 30 marks."

Disraeli and Primroses.

Disraeli's alleged fondness for the primrose rests upon rather flimsy evidence. Lady Dorothy Nevill, who knew him intimately, has recorded that she "never heard him express any particular admiration for the primrose, which it is always said was his favorite flower, though a great admirer of his used to send him big bunches of them from Torquay every spring." Grant Duff, when discussing the primrose cult with Lord Pembroke, was told, "There are two stories about it, but certainly he once told Cory, 'I like to be in the country when the primroses are out.'" A consensus of opinion seems to favor the idea that in Queen Victoria's inscription, "His favorite flower," the pronoun referred, not to Disraeli, but the prince consort.—London Mail.

In Their Own Coin.

When S. R. Crockett offered his first book to a certain firm of publishers they returned it with a curt note informing him that there was "no market for this sort of work." In the corner of the note was the index mark "No. 390C."

Some time later, when Mr. Crockett had become famous, this same firm wrote asking him to allow them to publish his next book. Mr. Crockett, who had carefully preserved their former rude letter, politely replied by asking them to refer to their own letter book under the sign "No. 390C." That closed the correspondence.

As You Like It.

Jimmy, who was no highbrow, had gone all alone to see one of those outdoor performances of Shakespeare. He was telling his elders about it. "Some class to Shakespeare," said Jimmy. "The show was fine." "But what show was it?" asked Jimmy's big sister. "Let Ev'rybody Do to Suit Hissself," replied Jimmy.—New York Post.

the world outside. It is sufficient unto itself. It is a little medieval China, with closed ports and insurmountable walls all round. Still, a very few atoms, like those of radium, have a tendency to communicate with the outer world by a kind of explosion.

If all atoms should burst their walls simultaneously the whole universe would be dissolved in an instant.

The atoms that do disintegrate pass from change to change. Within their limits the foundations of matter are broken up; the distinctions of the fundamental elements are confounded; things lose their nature and shift into other things; uranium gives birth to radium and to polonium; radium brings forth helium, and the last transformation of polonium that has thus far been observed is into plain lead! It is like a transmigration of atomic souls.

But this is not the only consequence of the opening of the world of the atom. That opening releases energy in forms which we can recognize and which some day perhaps we may be able to utilize.

Atomic energy is the magic lamp that the Aladdin of science has found in nature's secret cave.

One day Aladdin's mother found the rusty lamp where he had cast it aside as useless and thought that she would polish it up. Instantly, at the first vigorous rub, the slave of the lamp stood before her, ready to do her bidding!

The Aladdin of science has not thrown his lamp aside. He knows it is full of magic. He is sure that if he rubs it aright the genie will appear before him, but he has not yet learned the right stroke. And perhaps after all it will be with him as it was with the other Aladdin—accident will teach him the secret.

When that day comes, if ever it does, there will hardly be any limit to the transforming power of man over the world he lives in.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

Warned Against Coffee.

Once upon a time people wanted state wide prohibition of coffee. In his book, "London In English Literature," Percy H. Boynton says of the old coffee houses:

"As the number of them increased broadsides appeared against them. One was entitled 'The Woman's Petition Against Coffee,' and it asserted that coffee drinking encouraged idling and talkativeness and led men to trifle away their time, scald their chops and spend their money, all for a little base, black, thick, nasty, bitter, nauseous puddle water!"

Oct. 4.—Pastor Russell's text today was, "The life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar, to make an atonement for your souls; for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul." — Leviticus 17:11.

The discourse began with the

that death is in the world and that the tendency of sin is toward death. Despite their theories, statistics demonstrate that our race is daily becoming weaker, mentally, morally and physically. It is for them to explain how these facts fit their evolution theory.

The Bible View of Sin Atonement.

The Pastor then explained at length the Scriptural view of Sin Atonement. According to God's Word, sin is violation of Divine Law and the penalty is death. Adam was created perfect and sinless. Obedience to Divine Law was required of him as the price of everlasting life. Disobedience brought upon him the death sentence. His race was in his loins when he sinned and thus by heredity share his death penalty.

But God in mercy provided a way for man's relief. As the first man alone had sinned actually, so one Redeemer only would be necessary for the entire race. "The Man Christ Jesus gave himself a Ransom for all"—Adam's posterity. He antityped the bullock of Israel's Atonement Day and also the priest who slew the bullock—because He offered Himself up. Applying His merit to the Household of Faith—antitypical Levites — He then began a work little understood by either Jews or Gentiles.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 12.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 3505 cattle, 769 hogs, 1752 sheep and lambs and 515 calves.

Butcher's Cattle.

Choice steers, $5.25 to $5.50; choice heifers, $3.20 to $3.40; good steers and heifers, $7.75 to $8.10; medium, $7.25 to $7.60; common, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; canners and cutters, $3.50 to $4.50; bulls, $5 to $7.35.

Stocks and Feeders.

Prices for stockers and feeders were unchanged. Choice steers sold at $7 to $7.25; good steers at $6.50 to $6.75, and stockers at $5 to $6.25.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply sold at steady prices, ranging from $85 to $95 each, the bulk selling at $70 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

The bulk of the calves were of poor quality. Prices were quoted easier for the common grades. Choice calves sold at $10 to $10.50; good at $9 to $9.50; medium at $8 to $8.50; common at $7 to $7.50; inferior, rough, eastern calves at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, sold at $5.50 to $6; heavy ewes and rams sold at $3.50 to $5; lambs, $7.50 to $7.75, with a few at $8; cull lambs at $6 to $6.50.

Hogs.

Selects, $8.25, fed and watered; $7.90 f.o.b. cars, and $3.50 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the feature of today's trade was the weaker feeling for cattle, and prices declined 25c per 100 pounds, which was attributed to the increased receipts. There was a fairly good demand from packers and butchers for good to choice steers, and a fair trade was done in these grades, full loads of the former selling at $7.50 to $7.75, and of the latter at $8 to $8.25. The demand for medium and lower grades was somewhat limited, as buyers seemed to be well supplied. Sales of round lots of hogs were made at $4.65 to $5, and cows at $3.65 to $3.85 per 100 pounds.

The weak feeling which has characterized the market for live hogs for the past few weeks still continues to be the main feature of the provision market, and prices have declined 25c to 50c per cwt. since this day week. The supply was smaller than a week ago. The demand from packers was fair and sales of selected lots were made at $9, cows at $7 and stags at $4.50 per cwt. weighed off cars.

The feature of the small meat market was the weaker feeling in sheep, and prices declined 25c per cwt., which was attributed to the increased supplies coming forward. Lambs were firm. Ewes sold at $5.25 to $5.50, and bucks and culls at $4.75 to $5 per cwt. Lambs sold at $7.25 to $7.50 for Ontario and $6.75 to $7 per cwt. for Quebec stock. The supply of good to choice milk-fed calves was small, for which there was a good demand, and prices ruled firm at 7c to 2c per pound, live weight.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada. — "Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—MRS. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

DALTON'S EXPERIMENT.

Showing What a Genius Can Do With Crude Apparatus.

The great English chemist Dalton was a schoolteacher. He worked without a laboratory and with crude apparatus, mostly made by himself from simple materials. Here is an example described in his own words:

"Took an ale glass of a conical figure, two and a half inches in diameter and three inches deep; filled it with water that had been standing in the room and consequently of the temperature of the air nearly; put the bulb of the thermometer to the bottom of the glass, the scale being out of the water. Then, having marked the temperature, I put the redhot tip of the poker half an inch deep in the water, holding it there steadily for half a minute, and as soon as it was withdrawn I dipped the bulb of a sensible thermometer into the water, when it rose in a few seconds to 180 degrees."

He then determined the temperature of the water at the bottom after five minutes, after twenty minutes and after an hour and found that it rose gradually from 47 to 52 degrees. This simple experiment proved that water has the power to conduct heat, which had been denied by no less an authority me of the flesh in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar, to make an atonement for your souls; for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul." — Leviticus 17:11.

The discourse began with the declaration that ours is a day in which the necessity for sin atonement is disputed, disbelieved, by Jews, Gentiles and Christians. The orthodox Jew and the orthodox Christian, therefore are in substantial agreement with the Scriptures, and the inorthodox in agreement of opposition. The latter agree that there is no such thing as original sin, and that hence there could be no such thing as making an atonement or satisfaction to Justice on its behalf.

The Basis of Disbelief.

Two things have contributed to this unscriptural view: (1) The agnostic Jew not only disputes the Bible as authority on the subject, but admits that if the sacrifices commanded by the Levitical code for Sin Atonement be necessary, then the Jewish people have had no Sin Atonement in any sense of the word for more than eighteen centuries; for Sin Atonement must be made according to certain specified conditions or not at all. The loss of the Ark of the Covenant and the destruction of Jerusalem were among the disasters which have prevented the carrying out of Moses' instructions for the observance of the Atonement Day.

(2) Since the destruction of Jerusalem in A. D. 70, the Jewish nation has been scattered, and as a result all official records and genealogies of the Jewish people are destroyed. Therefore no one can prove his descent from Aaron, and hence cannot make a Sin Atonement on the Atonement Day.

Thus we see that it is impossible for Jews properly to observe the Atonement Day, although an outward ceremony is kept up. On the tenth day of the seventh month the Jew figuratively acknowledges that the merit of the previous sacrifice has expired. We sympathize with his position, but would suggest that nothing is gained by deceiving themselves into the supposition that this observance harmonizes them in any sense of the word with the Almighty. He sooner they recognize this, the sooner will they reach the proper end condition to realize that their calamities are due to the fact that the sins of more than eighteen centuries rest upon them uncanceled.

When they comprehend the situation, they will see that all their hopes centre in Messiah's Kingdom. Messiah will be the long-promised priest upon His Throne, the application of whose merit will effect the cancellation of sins forever.

Many Christians Repudiate the Blood Next it was shown that all the worldly-wise of Christendom have repudiated the Scriptural testimony respecting the necessity of a sacrificial death for the satisfaction of Divine justice, the cancellation of sin and the restitution of the sinner to Divine favor. The so-called New Theologians repudiate the fall of man, the ransom and the Restitution, claiming that nothing was lost and that we have it again.

These worldly-wise cannot deny normal man. As the first man alone had sinned actually, so one Redeemer only would be necessary for the entire race. "The Man Christ Jesus gave Himself a Ransom for all" — Adam's posterity. He antityped the bullock of Israel's Atonement Day and also the priest who slew the bullock—because He offered Himself up. Applying His merit to the Household of Faith—antitypical Levites — He then began a work little understood by either Jews or Gentiles.

This has been the gathering of the Elect class, composed of both Jews and Gentiles, their sacrifices being typified by the Lord's goat on the Atonement Day. Very soon this work of Sin Atonement will be completed, and the second effusion of blood upon the Mercy Seat made "for all the people."

"All the people" on the larger scale will not mean merely the Israelites outside of the Levites, but the whole world of mankind outside of the Household of Faith.

SCHOOLS IN ARABIA.

Pupils Sit Swaying on the Floor as They All Study Aloud.

In the schools of Arabia the children, with the schoolmaster, sit upon the floor or the ground in a semicircle, and each has a tablet of wood which is painted white and upon which the lessons are written. When the latter are learned they are washed out and replaced by other lessons.

During study hours the Arab schools remind one of the Chinese, for the children all study aloud, and as they chant they rock back and forth like trees in a storm, and this movement is continued for an hour or more at a time. The schoolmaster rocks back and forth also, and altogether the school presents a most novel appearance as well as sound. Worshipers in the mosques always move about while reciting the Koran, as this movement is believed to assist the memory.

The desks of the Arab schools are odd contrivances of palm sticks, upon which is placed the Koran or one of the thirty sections of it. After learning the alphabet the boys take up the study of the Koran, memorizing entire chapters of it until the sacred book is entirely familiar.

A peculiar method is followed in learning the Koran. The study begins with the opening chapter, and from this it skips to the last. The last but one is then learned, then the last but two, and so on in inverted order, ending finally with the second chapter.

Origin of the Word "Mustard."

Our English word "mustard" is traceable to the French "moutarde," the origin of which is curiously given. In 1382 Philip the Bold, duke of Burgundy, granted to the town of Dijon the privilege of bearing his armorial ensigns, with the motto "Moult me tarde" ("I wish ardently"), in return for a handsome contingent of a thousand men furnished to him at its expense. Pleased with the royal condescension, the authorities ordered the device to be affixed over the principal gates of the city. Time or accident at length obliterated the middle word, and the two remaining, moult tarde, were printed on the labels which the merchants of Dijon pasted on pots in which they sent this commodity all over the world.

FERRATA'S BODY IN STATE.

Late Papal Secretary of State Will Be Buried To-day.

ROME, Oct. 13. — Thousands of people, including cardinals, diplomats and high dignitaries of the church, Sunday viewed the body of Cardinal Ferrata, the late papal secretary of state, as it lay in state. After lying in state throughout yesterday the body was taken to the Church of St. John Lateran, where to-day a solemn funeral will be celebrated. Burial will be made in the family tomb in the diocese of Cracoli, near Viterbo.

Wounded Canadian Home.

MONTREAL, Oct. 13. — The first wounded Canadian from the war zone, Pte. Joseph Hay of the Cameron Highlanders, has arrived in Montreal. He was shot through a lung near Mons.

Pte. Hay was a reservist of the Cameron Highlanders, and has been a resident of Calgary. Last July he went to Perth, Scotland, to visit his grandfather. When the declaration of war came, on Aug. 4, he went to Edinburgh Castle to report.

The Conscientious Chinese Child.

One of our missionaries, writing of a little girl in the school under her care, says: "Last night Wah Noo told me she wanted to be 'a whole Christian,' as she called it. So we had a long talk and tried to think of all the wrong we had done that day and confess it to each other. She counted these wrongs on her fingers: 'I did not brush my teeth as you told me to do; I did not take off the lower sheet on the bed when I made it up, and I know I ought to always; I got angry with one of the girls at school; I did not use my soap when I took my bath; I did not try to do my example in multiplication; all the other girls did theirs wrong, so I thought I would too.'"—Cor. Christian Herald.

Poetry and Punctuation.

In his poem "Narcissus" Robert Bridges, the English poet laureate, has banished the comma entirely, so that a procession of adjectives may be taken, at the reader's option, as separate qualities or as qualifying each other. Thus one may call his hero "almighty wondrous" or regard him as being both. Mr. Bridges' principles of punctuation are not obvious. He loves the exclamation mark, using it five times in the twenty-eight lines of the poem, and sprinkles dashes about with prodigality. He adopts the colon and does not slight the interrogation mark, while using now and then a full stop.—Chicago News.

A Lucky Escape.

"I owe my success in life to politics." "I was not aware that you were a politician."

"I'm not, but I thought I was once and got myself nominated for an office that, if I had been elected, would have paid me about $1,500 a year. I was so badly beaten that I dropped politics forever and took up the business that has brought me a fortune. It makes me shudder when I remember that if I had been elected I might now be afraid of doing something that would deprive me of the lodging house vote."—Chicago Herald.

WANTS SPIES SUPPRESSED.

Lord Charles Beresford Insist That They Are Still a Menace.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Notwithstanding the reassuring statement issued by the Home Office last Thursday to the effect that the spy system established by Germany in this country has been completely broken up, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, retired, is convinced that it still exists and constitutes a grave menace to the safety of the country.

In a letter published yesterday, Lord Charles calls upon his countrymen "to take strong action with regard to the crowd of alien enemies in our midst." He urges that "meetings be held in every town, and that resolutions be adopted protesting against the present state of affairs and sent to the Prime Minister."

W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

Fifth Annual Convention of the Counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Held in Trenton, Oct. 1st and 2nd.

The convention opened on Thursday morning with a good attendance of County officers and representatives from the different Unions. The President, Mrs. Gibson, of Napanee, who was in the chair, conducted the devotional exercises.

After the appointment of plan of work, resolution and courtesy committees, the County officers reported on the work done during the year.

The Corresponding Secretary in her report showed a growth in membership and pledges and a deepening interest in the work. Total money raised $478.85. The Supt. of Flower and Fruit Mission gave details of excellent work done in the Belleville "Y" and also in the Belleville "W."

The Supt. of Mother's meetings reported having given several addresses showing the importance of the work. The department of Anti-narcotics (including cocaine and morphine) showed an awakening interest and the report contained many helpful suggestions. One Union gave leaflets to school children and had essays prepared for them.

After hearing the report of Parlor Meetings, all agreed that this was a particularly good department in which to specialize, as many could be reached in this way. The Supt. of Temperance in Sabbath Schools said this work was taken up thoroughly in Napanee with good results.

In the report of the Press department special mention was made of the work done in the Belleville "Y." The Medal Contest Supt. pointed out the educative value and the far reaching influence of this line of work.

The work in connection with railroads, sailors, soldiers and lumbercamps showed comfort-bags made, literature distributed and cash forwarded.

The Evangelistic Supt. emphasized the great need of prayer and urged upon the workers to take more time for devotional exercises.

Mrs. Miller, of Frankford, led in noon-tide prayer.

At the opening of the afternoon session Mrs. McKee, Provincial Hon. President, was introduced. Several excellent papers were then given in the School of Methods which led to interesting and instructive discussions. Two of the papers read are worthy of special mention, one on Parlor Meetings, contributed by Mrs. John Williams, of Belleville, and one "Essentials to Success" by Miss E. Farley, of Belleville.

A paper, "The Lost By-laws," showed the need of enforcing good laws already on our statute books. This was followed by another paper pointing out where other laws were needed.

The necessity of Loyal Temperance Legions was emphasized as in this work an opportunity was given to mold the character of the young. It was deemed by some the most important branch. Ninety per cent. of the children who sign the pledge keep it.

At the evening session, the Chairman, Rev. Mr. Foster, conducted the devotional service. The choir rendered an anthem after which addresses of welcome were given. Mrs. Dr. Goldsmith delighted the audience with two selections. Miss Foster rendered a solo very acceptably.

Mrs. McKee was the speaker of the evening. She impressed upon her hearers the great need of workers and

RESUMPTION OF BUSINESS.

Last Friday night about midnight a fire started in the bakery of W. M. Cambridge, Napanee, which resulted in an almost total loss of the contents of the bakery, although the building itself was not seriously damaged. The firemen responded very promptly and prevented the fire from spreading, having it under control and extinguished within an hour, for which due praise could be given them. A fire loss in a bakery is almost sure to be a total loss because such great care must be taken in the manufacture of food-stuffs that it does not do to risk the use of damaged or slightly damaged goods or appliances. In order that the quality of his bread and cakes may continue to be of the highest quality, Mr. Cambridge has reconstructed his bakery along the best lines possible and has installed new equipment with the idea in view of giving his customers the very best that can be manufactured in bread, cakes, pastry. The bakery will be reopened on Friday, the 16th. We take this opportunity of thanking our customers and friends for their help and co-operation during the past week and express the hope that our bread and cakes will find the favor and appreciation with them in the future that it has found in the past.

Yours truly,

W. M. CAMBRIDGE.

ed, not only in the fight against the drink habit, but also the increasing use of narcotics and the social evils claim our most earnest efforts. She spoke of the war and of our interest in our boys in the fighting line; we must take as deep an interest in our boys at home who are fighting greater evils. She gave the quotation "It is good to die for our country, but it is better to live for our country."

Addressing herself to the girls, Mrs. McKee impressed upon them their responsibility in exerting a helpful influence over young men. The moral standard for both men and women should be the same. Women can wield a great influence for good by wearing the little "Bow of White," the Emblem of Purity. Although women have no vote, they can use their influence to put the right men in power, men who will fight the evil in our land. One of the greatest means, Mrs. McKee said, of furthering our cause was through the press. She considered that next to the minister, the newspapers could wield the greatest influence for good.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem and Benediction.

Friday morning session was opened by devotional service conducted by Mrs. (Rev.) Rogers, of Trenton. The officers were elected for the coming year as follows:—

Hon. President—Mrs. John Williams, Belleville.

President—Mrs. Gibson, Napanee.

1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. W. S. Miller, Frankford.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. O. N. Rockwell, Napanee.

COMING

J. Y. Egan, Specialist of Toronto
Wonderful Method Retains Rupture Without Knife, Danger or Pain.

Old style truss torture is no longer necessary. Gallings, slipping trusses, barbarous methods of treating rupture done away with by the wonderful invention of a specialist who has devoted fifty years to this one study. The marvelous Egan "CURATRUS" is intended to give instant relief, rest and security without operation. It stops all irritation, restores rupture to natural position, and old trusses are thrown away.

Multitudes of cured men, women and children testify. Greatest success where others fail. Nothing complicated, no pain—just a natural retentive method at small cost.

Immediate relief guaranteed. No foreign mail order lies. Safer to patronize a Canadian personally. Do not delay; tear off coupon now.

work an opportunity was given to mold the character of the young. It was deemed by some the most important branch. Ninety per cent. of the children who sign the pledge keep it.

At the evening session, the Chairman, Rev. Mr. Foster, conducted the devotional service. The choir rendered an anthem after which addresses of welcome were given. Mrs. Dr. Goldsmith delighted the audience with two selections. Miss Foster rendered a solo very acceptably.

Mrs. McKee was the speaker of the evening. She impressed upon her hearers the great need of workers and how much there is to be accomplished.

The question box was then taken up by Mrs. McKee and County work discussed.

The closing session of the Convention opened at two o'clock. Mrs. McKee gave another excellent address which appealed strongly to all who were fortunate enough to hear it. A Union was then formed in Trenton, with a large membership and full list of officers.

The following Plan of Work was adopted for the coming year:

1. That we take up the distribution of literature, doing it in a discriminating and personal way; and that we have a literature depository in our County.

2. In view of the wide field that is open to us through the holding of parlor Meetings and the educative influence we can exert through them, we desire to specialize along this line.

3. That we endeavor to draw attention to the evil effects of narcotics (including cocaine and morphine) upon both mind and body; and that we urge the authorities to curtail the manufacture and sale of same.

4. Considering the evils arising from children being allowed on our streets at night and attending questionable places, we will turn our attention to endeavoring to enforce our laws regarding the guardianship of children (specially emphasizing the Curfew Bell). And that we also take up Loyal Temperance Legion work with greater vigor.

5. That Provincial Superintendents be advised to write a letter of instructions to any county or local Supt. of her department when asked to do so and not to send blank forms only.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved that we heartily endorse and will faithfully work for Local Option and License Reduction, believing that for the present these methods are the best weapons with which to fight the prohibition battle.

Resolved that as a County we co-operate with the Dominion W.C.T.U., by using our influence towards the passage of the cigarette bill now in the committee stage in the House of Commons.

Resolved that we place ourselves on record as approving of the stand taken by many newspapers of to-day in their refusal to print liquor advertisements and hope that many others will soon follow their example.

Resolved that we extend our thanks to all those who in any way have contributed to the success of this convention.

LIQUOR AND WAR.

What the London Times says, issue of Sept. 25th, 1914—"The trail of the German troops is marked, as innumerable witnesses testify, by myriads of empty bottles. Their once proud soldiers are now typified by the colonel found in a stupor amid his unconscious men beside a cask in an Epemay cellar. We may contrast with this picture the spectacle presented by the allies—Russia absolutely prohibiting the sale of vodka and beer throughout her immense dominions, France forbidding the sale of absinthe, the British soldier marching through the best vineyards in existence, and temperately demanding, as many letters tell us, his cup of tea. The great victory over drunkenness in Russia has received far too little attention in this country. Since China proscribed opium the world has seen nothing like it. We have been well reminded that in sternly prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquors, Russia has already vanquished a greater foe than the Germans. Is it fully realized yet for the allies, and for the first time in history, this is to all intents and purposes a "teetotal" war? We hope that the indiscreet people who insist on "treating" our soldiers and sailors on their return from the front will realize it very quickly.

"The fight sternly waged by all the allies alike against intemperance symbolizes the other victory which must eventually be theirs. Troops who march obeying the Tsar's Ukase, against drink, who carry in their knapsacks Lord Kitchener's admonition to adjure wine, already have an immense moral advantage over armies whose officers set their men the example of looting every cellar they find.
In the vinous excesses of the German forces we see a hint of their coming overthrow."

It is interesting to note that since the publication of this editorial it has been announced in Petrograd that the prohibition of the sale of vodka is to be continued indefinitely even after the end of the war. This order is based principally on the tremendously improved condition of the country since the Emperor issued the edict prohibiting traffic in this liquor. The Russian authorities are so impressed with this startling regeneration of the peasantry that they believe it is likely to have an important effect on the social and economic conditions of all Russia.

ADDITIONAL NAMES.

A number of names of Swisserville ladies who contributed to the donation given the Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Workers through the Daughters of the Empire, were unfortunately omitted in a list published two weeks ago, for which we are extremely sorry—the omission doubtless occurring from the fact that no list was enclosed with the parcels when sent in. The names omitted are as follows: Mrs. S. C. S. McKim, Mrs. M. N. Empey, Mrs. G. Shorey,
Miss M. Shorey, Mrs. T. Gibson, Mrs.
W. Pringle, Mrs. S. Martin.

GRACE CHURCH NOTES.

The Thanksgiving services in Grace Church were of a most interesting character. The congregations were large, especially in the evening, when the auditorium was packed and over 100 in the gallery. The music was of a very high order. In addition to the anthem rendered by our splendid choir
Mr. Feuter, of Switzerland, (cellist)
and Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron Wilson, (violinist) accompanied by Mrs. Black rendered in all four selections. These musicians are artists, and many of the strains were exquisite. Several members of the congregation declared that they had never heard sweeter music in their lives. In addition to the above, Miss Mary Dickson, of Campbellford was present and sang three solos. In the morning "Babyllon," and in the evening, "The Eternal City" and "The Honor of the Empire." Every one seemed captivated by her singing. Miss Dickson is assured of a good audience any time she comes to town. The morning service was enhanced by a splendid report of the General Conference given by Mr. M. S. Madole. Grace Church felt honored in having the only representative from this district, either clerical or lay, at the recent general conference.

OBJECTS ON THE MOON.

The Size They Must Be to Show in Our Different Telescopes.

The Abbe Moreux, director of the astronomical observatory of Bourges,
France, answers in Cosmos the question, "What is the smallest object visible on the moon?"

FACIAL FOLIAGE.

Looking For Mother's Spectacles In Father's Whiskers.

In the American Magazine James Montgomery Flagg writes an amusing piece entitled "Whiskerculture." Following is an extract:

"It's a heartrending sight in any case, this facial landscape gardening, from the time that they innocently say at breakfast, 'You forgot to shave, this morning, dear!' (It has taken three days for even the rough sketch you show them) to the dreadful harvest of your noxious inspiration.

"Picture the nervous strain on the wife and babes as they witness the gradual budding (blossoming) and fruition of the horror. How they sadly watch the head of the house slowly disappearing in a cloud of brambles.

"See those outstretched dimpled arms and hear those sobbing voices, 'Come back to us, papa!'

"Isn't your pride touched on the raw when your wife lifts up the door mat in the vestibule and kisses it good night on account of its comparative silkiness? Stop, consider, you who through some inherited mental weakness do not know the difference between right and whiskers—hesitate!
Why add to the strain of family life?
Even if you have provided your wife with a vacuum cleaner why multiply the cares of a busy housekeeper?

"Ask yourself if it will add in any way to the pleasure of any one in the family. When your mother has mis-laid her steel rimmed spectacles does it not make one more place that has to be ransacked?

"Men who embark on a career of whiskerculture are obviously thoughtless. What man would cultivate wistaria chinensis on his chin if he visu-alized himself at some future breakfast having to loop up those vines with portiere cords in order to slide a poached egg in without mutilating it?"

OBJECTS ON THE MOON.

The Size They Must Be to Show in Our Different Telescopes.

The Abbe Moreux, director of the astronomical observatory of Bourges, France, answers in Cosmos the question, "What is the smallest object visible on the moon?"

First, it is necessary to know what is the smallest angular magnitude that the naked eye can perceive. Experiment, says the abbe, proves this to be thirty seconds. In other words, an object that subtends an arc of thirty seconds is first visible to the naked eye. Therefore an object having an angular diameter of one second can be seen when it is magnified thirty times. An arc of one second represents about 6,000 square feet at the center of the lunar disc. Hence, a telescope that magnifies thirty times will make visible a spot 6,000 feet in diameter on the surface of the moon.

A more powerful telescope will reveal smaller objects. One with four inches aperture and a power of 800 will show objects of 600 feet diameter. One with a power of 2,000 diameters will reveal details measuring about ninety feet.

This, however, is theory. It takes a trained and practiced eye to see fine details through a telescope. The agitation of the earth's atmosphere by winds and currents interferes terribly with the use of very high powers in telescopes. An enlargement of 400 diameters almost exceeds the practical limit. It can be used only on perfectly clear, still nights when the moon is high above the horizon. This will reveal objects 450 feet in diameter, but will not show any form or detail.

BRAZIL'S FINE CAPITAL.

Rio de Janeiro is a Beautiful City, With No Poor Quarter.

"There are some cities very beautiful from a distance, but noisome and shabby when once they are entered. Rio de Janeiro, on the contrary, is beautiful when seen from afar and is delightful on intimate acquaintance. The streets are clean. The main thoroughfares are broad, and no other city has so many miles of smooth asphalted streets. Automobiles swarm and trolleys abound. The public buildings are handsome, the private buildings very picturesque and in northern eyes," writes Theodore Roosevelt in the Outlook, "possess a most attractive foreign flavor. The water supply is ample and not only healthful, but delicious. The sanitation is excellent. For over half the year the climate is delightful, and during the remaining months there is close at hand a cool mountain retreat.

"Altogether it is difficult to write of this city of over a million people without expressing astonishment that both its beauty and its greatness are not more widely understood.

"The condition of the poorer people is, I am assured and as I thoroughly believe, far removed from the misery of the slum dwellers in the great cities of the northern hemisphere. There is no especial quarter for the poor, nothing in the nature of a slum district, and there is much effort of one kind and another to provide decent living conditions for the poorest."

men who embark on a career of whiskerculture are obviously thoughtless. What man would cultivate viscaria chinensis on his chin if he visualized himself at some future breakfast having to loop up those vines with portiere cords in order to slide a poached egg in without mutilating it?"

PLANT INTELLIGENCE.

Maurice Maeterlinck Justifies Belief In Their Wisdom.

Gather, if you will, from the side of the path, in the very first tuft that you see, a blade of any grass, and you will find at work a little independent, untiring, unexpected intelligence. Here are two poor little creeping plants that you have seen a thousand times on your walks, for they are found everywhere, even in the tiniest crannies into which a bit of dust has been blown. They are two varieties of wild lucern, two bad weeds in the most modest sense of the word.

One bears a red blossom, the other a yellow crest the size of a pea. When you see them among other plants, you would hardly think that they, long before the illustrious geometrician and physicist of Syracuse had discovered and tried to apply, not to the raising of liquids, but to aviation, the astonishing properties of the power of Archimedes. They place their seeds in light spiral envelopes, with three or four turns, admirably constructed, when figuring upon their falling and being picked up by the wind, to be whirled a long distance in the air.

One of these, the yellow one, has even improved upon the apparatus of the red one, by furnishing the edges of the spiral with a double row of points, with the plain intention of attaching itself to any passer-by, by the clothing of humans, or the hair and wool of animals. It is clear that it hopes to enjoy the advantages of the aeronaut—that is, to scatter its seeds by aid of the sheep, rabbits, etc., thus going even further than those taken up by the air.

The most touching part of all this great effort is that it is useless. The poor red and yellow lucerns have deceived themselves. Their remarkable power will do them no good. They cannot act unless they fall from a certain distance, from the height of a tall tree; but dropping amid the grass, they fail to germinate. Here we have a curious instance of the errors, disappointments, experiments and little mishaps, occurring so often in nature, for we need study very little to know that nature never makes a mistake.

It is not only in the seed, or the blossom, but in the whole plant, twigs, leaves, roots, that we may find, if we will turn our attention to their humble work for a while, real traces of calculating and lively intelligence.

Just recollect the magnificent efforts toward the light of those branches turned the other way, or the ingenious and courageous efforts made by trees when in danger.

Among the plants which offer the most striking proofs of initiative, plants which we can really call animated or sensitive claim the right to a detailed study. Let me but call to mind the delicate right of the sensitive plants, the modest mimosa, known to all of us. Other plants capable of spontaneous movements are less well known, notably the hedyasrum gyrans, or waving fennugreek, which moves in a most surprising manner.

This little plant, originating in Bengal, but often cultivated in our gardens, does a kind of perpetual complicated dance in honor of light. —Maurice Maeterlinck.

HOME OF THE BIG TREES.

Forest Giants In the Sequoia and General Grant National Parks.

The Sequoia and General Grant National parks, the home of the big trees, are situated in Tulare and Fresno counties, Cal., and are celebrated mainly for the great groves of the big trees which are scattered through them. Sequoia National park may be reached from Visalia, thence by way of electric railway to Lemon cove, thence forty miles by stage or private conveyance to Camp Sierra, in the park. General Grant National park can be best reached from Sanger, thence by automobile, stage or private conveyance, a distance of forty-six miles to the park.

The streams and lakes in these parks afford splendid trout fishing, boating and bathing. The waters are all pure and fit to drink. The forests contain the largest, oldest, tallest and most valuable trees in the world. Aside from the giant Sequoia, there are other forests of pine, fir, cedar and many deciduous trees that are truly royal.
There are many shrubs, wild flowers,
ferns and mosses of superb beauty, while frolicking wild animals and beautiful song birds are another enjoyable feature of the parks.

In four of the groves certain trees within them have been named, while in all other groves they have not. The General Sherman tree was discovered by James Wolverton, a hunter and trapper, on Aug. 7, 1879, at which time he named the tree in honor of General Sherman, under whom he had served during the war. The General Grant tree was named by Mrs. Lucretia P.
Baker, who was a member of the party which camped near the tree in August, 1867. This tree has a height of 264 feet and a base diameter of thirty-five feet.

EXPECTATION OF LIFE.

Years One May Count Upon Living at Any Given Age.

No statistics have been calculated with greater care than the tables which give the exact expectation of life for men and women at various ages. These mortality tables are officially accepted by the various states in the United States, and from them the life insurance companies compute their rates of insurance. They are as accurate as the most carefully gathered figures can make them.

At ten years of age the expectation of life is 48.72 years. When one has reached the age of twenty the chances are much improved, and there is still an expectation of 42.20 years before one. At the age of twenty-five the average has improved, and there are still some thirty-nine years ahead.

For the normal man or woman thirty years of age the average length of life is sixty-five years. A person thirty-five years old may count, according to these tables, on thirty-two years more.

As each milestone is passed the prospect brightens. Thus at the age of forty the prospect is for nearly twenty-nine years more, and at forty-five there is an expectation of twenty-five more years.

By the fiftieth year the expectation is about twenty-one years, and in the fifty-fifth year it is nearly eighteen more. A man of sixty may look forward with some confidence to fifteen more years of life, and this increases so that at seventy years the prospect is eight years. On having successfully passed the eightieth year there is an expectation of about five years—Exchange.

Henner Had a Way of Making the Louvre Officials See the Light.

It is a pity that Henner is dead. He had found an excellent means to force the conservators at the Louvre to bring down the pictures that he judged had been placed too high. He made use of this method in the case of "Susanne au Bain" ("Susanna at the Bath") of Tintoretto.

Twenty years ago this masterpiece was hung in the gallery four meters from the floor.

Henner was furious at this injustice. But he did not permit his anger to appear. He contented himself with coming from time to time in the morning before the visitors were numerous in the halls and in the most courteous tone requesting the keepers to furnish him a large double ladder.

The keepers referred the matter to the conservators, saying that this ladder was asked by M. Henner, and they were impressed with the necessity of responding to the wish of the old master.

Then he placed the ladder before Susanna, mounted the steps slowly and, when at the top, remained a quarter of an hour absorbed in the contemplation of the marvelous painting.

He then descended as phlegmatically and, with a fine smile, said in his Alsatian jargon: "Merci pour l'effelle. Je suis tres content!" ("Thanks for the ladder. I am much pleased!")

He went through this maneuver half a dozen times at intervals.

At last the conservators understood. They had "Susanne au Bain" unbooked and gave it a place of honor in the square salon, where it is now.—Uri de Paris.

Javelle Water.

Wherever water is used in preparing bleaches it should be soft. The alkali in hard water affects all chemical substances. Javelle water is a standard preparation for bleaching white things and removing spots and stains, but it must not touch colored surfaces. To make it, dissolve half a pound of washing soda in a pint of boiling water and mix it with a quarter pound of chloride of Ume dissolved in a quart of boiling water. Stir well, let settle, pour off the clear liquid and keep closely corked in a dark place.

It Wasn't Annie.

Auntie felt called upon to chide Annie for getting wet so often. One day mother and auntie were sitting by the dining table talking of Annie's still being out when it was beginning to rain.

Just then they heard the kitchen door open softly.

"Who has wet feet now?" called auntie.

An ominous stillness for the space of three seconds, then a gruff voice replied:

"The iceman."

A Portrait.

When he can't get front seats at the theatre he growls about the box office discrimination; when he can decide not to take them after all—for the show can't be a good one, or they would have been gone long ago. We all know the complete pessimist. He is almost as depressing as the professional optimist.

A Serious Fault.

"It's nice of you to let me see your proofs, Mr. Lavender. Which do I consider the best? That's rather difficult. There isn't one here that really does you justice—photographic justice, I mean."

"Thank you, Miss Lydia. I would esteem it a great favor if you could intimate a preference."

"Really, I couldn't, Mr. Lavender. Each proof shows the prevailing fault."

"And what fault is that, Miss Lydia?"

"They are all too lifelike."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Political Situation.

"What are your views on the political situation?"

"When it comes to a political situation," replied Farmer Cornstassel, "you will have to talk to Si Simlin, the postmaster. He's the only feller around here that ever had one."—Washington Star.

The Story of Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Copyright, 1913, by Kate Douglas Wiggin

"Pends upon whether the girl's the jumpin' kind or not. Hadn't you better git everything fixed up with the one you've picked out afore you take your good savin's and go to buildin' a bigger place for her?"

"I've asked her once a'ready," Cephas allowed with a burning face. "I don't s'pose you know the one I mean?"

"No kind of an idee," responded his father with a quizzical wink that was lost on the young man, as his eyes were fixed upon his whittling. "Does she belong to he village?"

"I ain't goin' to let folks know who I've picked out till I git a little mite forrarder," responded Cephas craftily. "Say, father, it's all right to ask a girl twice, ain't it?"

"Certain it is, my son. I never heerd there was any special limit to the number o' times you could ask 'em, and their power o' sayin' 'No' is like the mercy of the Lord—it endureth forever. You wouldn't consider a widder, Cephas? A widder'd be a good comp'ny keeper for your mother."

"I hain't put my good savin's into an ell jest to marry a comp'ny keeper for mother," responded Cephas huffily. "I want to be No. 1 with my girl and start right in on trainin' her up to suit me."

"Well, if trainin' 's your object you'd better take my advice an' keep it dark before marriage, Cephas. It's astonishin' how the female sect despises bein' trained. It don't hardly seem to be in their nature to make any changes in 'emselves after they once gits started."

"How are you goin' to live with 'em, then?" Cephas inquired, looking up with interest coupled with some in credulity.

"Let them do the trainin'," responded his father, peacefully puffing out the words with his pipe between his lips. "Some of 'em's mild and gentle in discipline, like Parson Boone's wife or Mis' Timothy Grant, and others is strict and firm like your mother and Mis' Abel Day. If you happen to git the first kind, why, do as they tell you, and thank the Lord 'tain't any worse. If you git the second kind jest let 'em put the blinders on you and trot as straight as you know how, without shyn' nor kickin' over the traces, nor boltin', 'cause they've got control o' the bit and 'tain't no use fightin' ag'in' their superior strength. So fur as you can judge, in the early stages o' the game, my son—which ain't very fur—which kind have you picked out?"

Cephas whittled on for some moments without a word, but finally, with a sigh drawn from the very toes of his boots, he responded gloomily:

"She's awful spunky, the girl is; anybody can see that; but she's a young

Cephas went to the pump and, wetting a large handkerchief, put it in the crown of his straw hat and sauntered out into the burning heat of the open road between his father's shop and Deacon Baxter's store.

"I shan't ask her the next time till this hot spell's over," he thought, "and I won't do it in that dogdasted old store ag'in, neither. I ain't no tongue tied outdoors, an' I kind o' think I'd be more in the spirit of it after sun down some night after supper!"

Waitstill found a cool and shady place in which to hitch the old mare, loosening her checkrein and putting a sprig of alder in her headstall to assist her in brushing off the flies.

One could reach the Boynton house only by going up a long grass grown lane that led from the high road. It was a lonely place and Aaron Boynton had bought it when he moved from Saco simply because he secured it at a remarkable bargain, the owner having lost his wife and gone to live in Massachusetts. Ivory would have sold it long ago had circumstances been different, for it was at too great a distance from the schoolhouse and from Lawyer Wilson's office to be at all convenient, but he dreaded to remove his mother from the environment to which she was accustomed and doubted very much whether she would be able to care for a house to which she had not been wonted before her mind became affected.

Here in this safe, secluded corner, amid familiar and thoroughly known conditions, she moved placidly about her daily tasks, performing them with the same care and precision that she had used from the beginning of her married life. All the heavy work was done for her by Ivory and Rodman; the boy in particular being the fleetest footed, the most willing and the neatest of helpers; washing dishes, sweeping and dusting, laying the table as deftly and quietly as a girl. Mrs. Boynton made her own simple dresses of gray calico in summer, or dark linsley-woolsey in winter by the same pattern that she had used when she first came to Edgewood; in fact, there were positively no external changes anywhere to be seen, tragic and terrible as had been those that had wrought havoc in her mind.

Waitstill's heart beat faster as she neared the Boynton house. She had never so much as seen Ivory's mother for years. How would she be met? Who would begin the conversation and what direction would it take? What if Mrs. Boynton should refuse to talk to her at all? She walked slowly along the lane until she saw a slender, gray clad figure stooping over a flower bed in front of the cottage. The woman raised her head with a fawn-like gesture that had something in it of timidity rather than fear, picked some loose bits of green from the ground, and, quietly turning her back upon the oncoming stranger, disappeared through the open front door.

There could be no retreat on her own part now, thought Waitstill. She wished for a moment that she had made this first visit under Ivory's protection, but her idea had been to gain Mrs. Boynton's confidence and have a quiet friendly talk, such a one as would be impossible in the presence of a third person. Approaching the steps, she called through the doorway in her clear voice: "Ivory asked me to come and see you one day, Mrs. Boynton. I an for many years, and she studied her a little, wistfully yet courteously, as if her attention was attracted by something fresh and winning. She looked at the color ebbing and flowing in the girl's cheeks, at her brows and lashes, at her neck as white as swansdown.

CHAPTER XIII. Ivory's Mother.

"I HAD a daughter once," she said. "My second baby was a girl, but she lived only a few weeks. I need her very much, for I am a great care to Ivory. He is son and daughter both, now that Mr. Boynton is away from home. You did not see any one in the road as you turned in from the bars, I suppose?"

"No," answered Waitstill, surprised and confused, "but I didn't really notice. I was thinking of a cool place for my horse to stand."

"I sit out here in these warm afternoons," Mrs. Boynton continued, shading her eyes and looking across the fields, "because I can see so far down the lane. I have the supper table set for my husband already, and there is a surprise for him, a saucer of wild strawberries I picked for him this morning. If he does not come I always take away the plate and cup before Ivory gets here. It seems to make him unhappy."

"He doesn't like it when you are disappointed, I suppose," Waitstill ventured. "I have brought my knitting, Mrs. Boynton, so that I needn't keep you idle if you wish to work. May I sit down a few minutes? And here is a cottage cheese for Ivory and Rodman and a jar of plums for you preserved from my own garden."

Mrs. Boynton's eyes searched the face of this visitor from a world she had almost forgotten and, finding nothing but tenderness there, said, with just a trace of bewilderment: "Thank you. Yes, do sit down. My work-basket is just inside the door. Take that rocking chair. I don't have another one out here because I have never been in the habit of seeing visitors."

"I hope I am not intruding," stammered Waitstill, seating herself and beginning her knitting to see if it would lessen the sense of strain between them.

"Not at all. I always loved young and beautiful people, and so did my husband. If he comes while you are here do not go away, but sit with him while I get his supper. If Elder Cochrane should be with him you would see two wonderful men. They went away together to do some missionary work in Maine and New Hampshire, and perhaps they will come back together. I do not welcome callers because they always ask so many difficult questions, but you are different and have asked me none at all."

"I should not think of asking questions, Mrs. Boynton."

"Not that I should mind answering them," continued Ivory's mother, "except that it tires my head very much to think. You must not imagine I am ill; it is only that I have a very bad memory, and when people ask me to remember something or to give an answer quickly it confuses me the more. Even now I have forgotten why you came and where you live, but I have not forgotten your beautiful name."

"Ivory thought you might be lonely, and I wanted so much to know you that I could not keep away any longer, have ever hidden from my dear s but I think I could tell you if only could be sure about it."

"Tell me if it will help you. I v try to understand," said Waitstill brokenly.

"Ivory says Rodman is the child my dead sister. Some one must have told him so. Could it have been? It haunts me day and night, for unl I am remembering wrong again I n er had a sister. I can call to mi neither sister nor brother."

"You went to New Hampshire t winter," Waitstill reminded her gent as if she were talking to a child. "was bitter cold for you to take such hard journey. Your sister died a you brought her little boy, Rodm back, but you were so ill that a str ger had to take care of you on t stagecoach and drive you to Edgewo next day in his own sleigh. It is wonder you have forgotten somethi of what happened, for Dr. Perry ha ly brought you through the brain fev that followed that journey."

"I seem to think now that it is r so," said Mrs. Boynton, opening h eyes and looking at Waitstill despa ingly. "I must grope and grope the dark until I find out what is tr and then tell Ivory. God will pun false speaking! His heart is clos against lies and evil-doing!"

"He will never punish you if yo tired mind remembers wrong," sa Waitstill. "He knows, none bett how you have tried to find him as hold him through many a tangl path. I will come as often as I ca and we will try to frighten away the worrying thoughts."

"If you will only come now and the and hold my hand," said Ivory's mot er, "hold my hand so that your streng will flow into my weakness, perhaps shall puzzle it all out and God w help me to remember right before die."

"Everything that I have power give away shall be given to yo promised Waitstill. "Now that I kno you and you trust me you shall nev be left so alone again—not for long, any rate. When I stay away you v remember that I cannot help it, wo you?"

"Yes, I shall think of you till I s you again. I shall watch the long la more than ever now. Ivory sometime the blinders on you and trot as straight as you know how, without shyn' nor kickin' over the traces, nor boltin', 'cause they've got control o' the bit and 'tain't no use fightin' ag'in their superior strength. So fur as you can judge, in the early stages o' the game, my son—which ain't very fur—which kind have you picked out?"

Cephas whittled on for some moments without a word, but finally, with a sigh drawn from the very toes of his boots, he responded gloomily:

"She's awful spunky, the girl is; anybody can see that; but she's a young thing, and I thought bein' married would kind o' tame her down."

"You can see how much marriage has tamed your mother down," observed Uncle Bart dispassionately. "Howsomever, though your mother can't be called tame, she's got her good p'int, for she's always to be counted on. The great thing in life, as I take it, Cephas, is to know exactly what to expect. Your mother's gen'ally credited with an unsartin temper, but folks does her great injustice in so thinkin', for in a long experience I've seldom come across a temper less unsartin than your mother's. You know exactly where to find her every mornin' at sunup and every night at sundown. There ain't nothin' you can do to put her out o' temper, 'cause she's all out aforehand. You can jest go about your reglar business 'thout any fear o' disturbin' her any further than she's disturbed a'ready, which is consid'able. I don't mind it a mite nowadays, though, after forty years of it. It would kind o' gall me to keep a stiddy watch of a female's disposition day by day, wonderin' when she was goin' to have a tantrum. A tantrum once a year's an awful upsettin' kind of a thing in a family, my son, but a tantrum every twenty-four hours is jest part o' the day's work." There was a moment's silence, during which Uncle Bart puffed his pipe and Cephas whittled, after which the old man continued: "Then if you happen to marry a temper like your mother's, Cephas, look what a pow'ful worker you gen'ally get! Look at the way they sweep an' dust an' scrub an' clean! Watch 'em when they go at the dish washin' an' how they whack the rollin' pin an' maul the eggs an' heave the wood into the stove an' slat the flies out o' the house! The mild and gentle ones likely enough will be settin' in the kitchen rocker readin' the almanac when there ain't no wood in the kitchen box, no doughnuts in the crock, no pies on the swing shelf in the cellar an' the young ones goin' round without a second shift to their backs!"

Cephas' mind was far away during this philosophical dissertation on the ways of women. He could see only a sunny head fairly rioting with curls, a pair of eyes that held his like magnets, although they never gave him a glance of love; a smile that lighted the world far better than the sun, a dimple into which his heart fell headlong whenever he looked at it.

"You're right, father; 'tain't no use kickin' ag'in 'em," he said as he rose to his feet preparatory to opening the Baxter store. "When I said that 'bout trainin' up a girl to suit me, I kind o' forgot the one I've picked out. I'm considerin' several, but the one I favor most—well, I believe she'd fire up at the first sight o' trainin', and that's the gospel truth."

"Considerin' several, be you, Cephas?" laughed Uncle Bart. "Well, all I hope is that the one you favor most—the girl you've asked once a'ready—is considerin' you!"

quietly turning her back upon the oncoming stranger, disappeared through the open front door.

There could be no retreat on her own part now, thought Waitstill. She wished for a moment that she had made this first visit under Ivory's protection, but her idea had been to gain Mrs. Boynton's confidence and have a quiet friendly talk, such a one as would be impossible in the presence of a third person. Approaching the steps, she called through the doorway in her clear voice: "Ivory asked me to come and see you one day, Mrs. Boynton. I am Waitstill Baxter, the little girl on Town House hill that you used to know."

Mrs. Boynton came from an inner room and stood on the threshold. The name "Waitstill" had always had a charm for her ears, from the time she first heard it years ago until it fell from Ivory's lips this summer, and again it caught her fancy.

"Waitstill!" she repeated softly. "Waitstill! Does Ivory know you?"

"We've known each other for ever so long—ever since we went to the brick school together when we were boy and girl. And when I was a child my stepmother brought me over here once on an errand, and Ivory showed me a humming bird's nest in that lilac bush by the door."

Mrs. Boynton smiled. "Come and look!" she whispered. "There is always a humming bird's nest in our lilac. How did you remember?"

The two women approached the bush, and Mrs. Boynton carefully parted the leaves to show the dainty morsel of a home thatched with soft gray green and lined with down. "The birds have flown now," she said. "They were like little jewels when they darted off in the sunshine."

Her voice was faint and sweet, as if it came from far away, and her eyes looked not as if they were seeing you, but seeing something through you. Her pale hair was turned back from her paler face, where the veins showed like blue rivers, and her smile was like the flitting of a moonbeam. She was standing very close to Waitstill,

"Waitstill! Does Ivory know you?"

closer than she had been to any womman, Mrs. Boynton.

"Not that I should mind answering them," continued Ivory's mother, "except that it tires my head very much to think. You must not imagine I am ill; it is only that I have a very bad memory, and when people ask me to remember something or to give an answer quickly it confuses me the more. Even now I have forgotten why you came and where you live, but I have not forgotten your beautiful name."

"Ivory thought you might be lonely, and I wanted so much to know you that I could not keep away any longer, for I am lonely and unhappy too. I am always watching and hoping for what has never come yet. I have no mother, you have lost your daughter; I thought—I thought—perhaps we could be a comfort to each other." And Waitstill rose from her chair and put out her hand to help Mrs. Boynton down the steps, she looked so frail, so transparent, so prematurely aged. "I could not come very often, but if I could only smooth your hair sometimes when your head aches or do some cooking for you or read to you or any little thing like that as I would for my own mother, if I could, I should be so glad."

Waitstill stood a head higher than Ivory's mother, and the glowing health of her, the steadiness of her voice, the warmth of her handclasp must have made her seem like a strong refuge to this storm tossed derelict. The deep furrow between Lois Boynton's eyes relaxed a trifle, the blood in her veins ran a little more swiftly under the touch of the young hand that held hers so closely. Suddenly a light came into her face and her lip quivered.

"Perhaps I have been remembering wrong all these years," she said. "It is my great trouble, remembering wrong. Perhaps my baby did not die as I thought; perhaps she lived and grew up; perhaps—her pale cheek burned and her eyes shone like stars—perhaps she has come back!"

Waitstill could not speak. She put her arm round the trembling figure, holding her as she was wont to hold Patty and with the same protective instinct. The embrace was electric in its effect and set altogether new currents of emotion in circulation. Something in Lois Boynton's perturbed mind seemed to beat its wings against the barriers that had heretofore opposed it and, freeing itself, mounted into clearer air and went singing to the sky. She rested her cheek on the girl's breast with a little sob. "Oh, let me go on remembering wrong!" she sighed from that safe shelter. "Let me go on remembering wrong! It makes me so happy!"

Waitstill gently led her to the rocking chair and sat down beside her on the lowest step, stroking her thin hand. Mrs. Boynton's eyes were closed, her breath came and went quickly, but presently she began to speak hurriedly as if she were relieving a surcharged heart.

"There is something troubling me," she began, "and it would ease my mind if I could tell it to some one who could help. Your hand is so warm and so firm! Oh, hold mine closely and let me draw in strength as long as you can spare it! It is flowing, flowing from your hand into mine, flowing like wine. My thoughts at night are not like my thoughts by day these last weeks. I wake suddenly and feel that my husband has been away a long time and will never come back. Often at night, too, I am in sore trouble about something else, something I have never told Ivory, the first thing I takes the path across the fields, I my dear husband will come by the road, and now there will be you look for!"

At the Baxters the late supper was over, and the girls had not sat at table with their father, having eaten earlier by themselves. The hired man had gone home to sleep. Patty had tired to the solitude of her bedroom almost at dusk, quite worn out with the heat, and Waitstill sat under a peach tree in the corner of her little garden, tating and thinking her interview with Ivory's mother. She sat there until nearly 8 o'clock trying vainly to put together the puzzling details of Lois Boynton's conversation, wondering whether the perplexities that vexed her mind were real fancies, but warmed to the heart by the affection that the older woman seemed instinctively to feel for her. "She did not know me, yet she came for me at once," thought Waitstill tenderly and proudly, "and I for her, too, at the first glance."

She heard her father lock the back door and shed and knew that he would be going upstairs immediately, so she quickly went through the side yard and lifted the latch of the kitchen door. It was fastened. She went to the front door, and that, too, was closed, although it had been standing open all the evening so that if a breeze should spring up it might blow through the house. Her father supposed, of course, that she was in bed, and dreaded to bring him downstairs in fear of his anger. Still there was help for it, and she rapped smartly on the side door. There was no answer and she rapped again, vexed with her own carelessness. Patty's face peered promptly behind her screen mosquito netting in the second story but before she could exchange a word with her sister Deacon Baxter opened the blinds of his bedroom window and put his head out.

"You can try sleepin' outdoors or the barn tonight," he called. "I did say anything to you at supper time, 'cause I wanted to see where you was intendin' to prow! this evenin'."

"I haven't been 'prowlin' anywhere father," answered Waitstill. "I been out in the garden cooling off. It's only 8 o'clock."

"Well, you can cool off some more," he shouted, his temper now fully aroused, "or go back where you was this afternoon and see if they'll let you in there! I know all about your deceitful tricks. I come home and grind the scythes and found the barn empty. Cephas said you driven up Saco hill and I took horse and followed you and saw where you went. Long's you couldn't be ever hidden from my dear son. I think I could tell you if only I'd be sure about it."

"I'll tell me if it will help you. I will try to understand," said Waitstill only.

Ivory says Rodman is the child of dead sister. Some one must have him so. Could it have been I? I hunt me day and night, for unless I'm remembering wrong again I never had a sister. I can call to mind no sister nor brother."

"You went to New Hampshire one day," Waitstill reminded her gently, "she were talking to a child. 'It's bitter cold for you to take such a journey. Your sister died and brought her little boy, Rodman, but you were so ill that a stranger had to take care of you on the coach and drive you to Edgewood day in his own sleigh. It is no wonder you have forgotten something that happened, for Dr. Perry hard-ly followed that journey.'"

"I seem to think now that it is not said Mrs. Boynton, opening her and looking at Waitstill despair-ly. "I must grope and grope in the dark until I find out what is true then tell Ivory. God will punish speaking! His heart is closed as lies and evil-doing!"

"I will never punish you if your mind remembers wrong," said Waitstill. "He knows, none better, you have tried to find him and him through many a tangled web. I will come as often as I can, we will try to frighten away these ying thoughts."

"You will only come now and then hold my hand," said Ivory's mother, "hold my hand so that your strength flow into my weakness, perhaps I'll puzzle it all out and God will me to remember right before I die."

"Everything that I have power to do away shall be given to you," said Waitstill. "Now that I know and you trust me you shall never be left so alone again—not for long, at least. When I stay away you will remember that I cannot help it, won't you?"

"Yes, I shall think of you till I see you again. I shall watch the long lane as often as I can. Ivory sometimes a feller callin' on you here to home you thought you'd call on him, did yer, you boldfaced hussy?"

"I am nothing of the sort," the girl answered him quietly. "Ivory Boynton was not at his house. He was in the hayfield. You know it, and you know that I knew it. I went to see a sick, unhappy woman who has no neighbors. I ought to have gone long before. I am not ashamed of it, and I don't regret it. If you ask unreasonable things of me you must expect to be disobeyed once in awhile."

"Must expect to be disobeyed, must I?" the old man cried, his face positively terrifying in its ugliness. "We'll see about that. If you wa'n't callin' on a young man you were callin' on a crazy woman, and I won't have it, I tell you, do you hear? I won't have a daughter o' mine consortin' with any o' that Boynton crew. Perhaps a night outdoors will teach you who's master in this house, you imperdent, shameless girl! We'll try it anyway!" And with that he banged down the window and disappeared, gibbering and jabbering impotent words that she could hear, but not understand.

CHAPTER XIV.

Looked Out.

WAITSTILL was almost stunned by the suddenness of this catastrophe. She stood with her feet rooted to the earth for several minutes and then walked slowly away out of sight of the house. There was a chair beside the grindstone under the Porter apple tree, and she sank into it, crossed her arms on the back and, bowing her head on them, burst into a fit of weeping as tempestuous and passionate as it was silent, for, although her body fairly shook with sobs, no sound escaped.

The minutes passed, perhaps an hour; she did not take account of time. The moon went behind clouds, the night grew misty, and the stars faded one by one. There would be rain to-morrow, and there was a great deal of hay cut, so she thought in a vagrant sort of way.

Meanwhile Patty upstairs was in a state of suppressed excitement and terror. It was a quarter of an hour before her father settled himself in bed, then an age it seemed to her before she heard his heavy breathing. When she thought it quite safe she slipped on a print wrapper, took her shoes in her hand and crept noiselessly downstairs, out through the kitchen and into the shed. Lifting the heavy bar that held the big doors in place, she closed them softly behind her, stepped out and looked about her in the darkness. Her quick eye espied in the distance near the barn the bowed figure in the chair, and she flew through the wet grass without a thought of her bare feet till she reached her sister's side and held her in a close embrace.

"My darling! My own, own poor darling!" she cried softly, the tears running down her cheeks. "How wicked, how unjust, to serve my dearest sister so! Don't cry, my blessing, don't cry! You frighten me! I'll take care of you, dear. Next time I'll interfere. I'll scratch and bite, yes, I'll strangle anybody that dares to shame you and lock you out of the house—you, the dearest, the patientest, the best!"

Waitstill wiped her eyes. "Let us go farther away where we can talk," she whispered.

"Where had we better sleep?" Patty asked. "On the hay, I think, though we shall stifle with the heat," and my 'say so' must be law in this house. You can fuss and you can fume if it amuses you any, but 'twon't do no good. Don't encourage Waitstill in any whinin' or blubberin'. Jest tell her to come in and go to work and I'll overlook what she done this time. And don't you give me any more of your eye snappin' and lip poutin' and head in the air impudence! You're under age, and if you don't look out you'll get somethin' that's good for what ails you! You two girls jest aid an' abet one another—that's what you do, aid and abet one another—an' if you carry it any further I'll find some way o' separatin' you, do you hear?"

Patty spoke never a word nor fluttered an eyelash. She had a proper spirit, but now her heart was cold with a new fear, and she felt, with Waitstill, that her father must be obeyed and his temper kept within bounds until God provided them a way of escape.

She ran out to the barn chamber and, not finding Waitstill, looked across the field and saw her coming through the path from the woods. Patty waved her hand and ran to meet her sister, joy at the mere fact of her existence, of being able to see her again and of hearing her dear voice almost choking her in its intensity. When they reached the house she helped her upstairs as if she were a child, brought her cool water to wash away the dust of the haymow, laid out some clean clothes for her and finally put her on the lounge in the darkened sitting room.

"I won't let anybody come near the house," she said, "and you must have a cup of tea and a good sleep before I tell you all that father said. Just comfort yourself with the thought that he is going to overlook it this time. After I carry up his luncheon I shall stop at the store and ask Cephas to come out on the river bank for a few minutes. Then I shall proceed to say what I think of him for telling father where you went yesterday afternoon."

"Don't blame Cephas!" Waitstill remonstrated. "Can't you see just how it happened? He and Uncle Bart were sitting in front of the shop when I drove by. When father came home Courage isn't not being frightened. It's not screeching when you are frightened. Now, what happened at the Boyntons?"

"Patty, Ivory's mother is the most pathetic creature I ever saw." And Waitstill sat up on the sofa, her long braids of hair hanging over her shoulders, her pale face showing the traces of her heavy weeping. "I never pitied any one so much in my whole life. To go up that long, long lane; to come upon that dreary house hidden away in the trees; to feel the loneliness and the silence and then to know that she is living there like a hermit thrush in a forest without a woman to care for her it is heart breaking!"

"How does the house look—dreadful?"

"No. Everything is as neat as wax. She isn't 'crazy,' Patty, as we understand the word. Her mind is beclouded somehow, and it almost seems as if the cloud might lift at any moment. She goes about like somebody in a dream, sewing or knitting or cooking. It is only when she talks, and you notice that her eyes really see nothing, but are looking beyond you, that you know there is anything wrong."

"If she appears so like other people, why don't the neighbors go to see her once in awhile?"

"Callers make her unhappy, she says, and Ivory told me that he dared not encourage any company in the house for fear of exciting her and making her an object of gossip besides. He knows her ways perfectly and that she is safe and content with her fancies when she is alone, which is seldom, after all."

"What does she talk about?" asked Patty.

"Her husband mostly. She is expecting him to come back daily. We knew that before, of course, but no one can realize it till they see her setting the table for him and putting a saucer of wild strawberries by his plate, going about the kitchen softly, like a gentle ghost."

"No, you must go back to the house at once, Patty, dear. Father might wake and call you and that would make matters worse. It's beginning to drizzle or I should stay out in the air. Oh, I wonder if father's mind is going and if this is the beginning of the end! If he is in his sober senses he could not be so strange, so suspicious, so unjust."

"He could be anything, say anything, do anything!" exclaimed Patty. "Per- haps he is not responsible and perhaps he is; it doesn't make much difference to us. Come along, blessed darling! I'll tuck you in and then I'll creep back to the house if you say I must. I'll go down and make the kitchen fire in the morning; you stay out here and see what happens. A good deal will hap- pen, I'm thinking, if father speaks to me of you! I shouldn't be surprised to see the fur flying in all directions. I'll seize the first moment to bring you out a cup of coffee and we'll con- sult about what to do. I may tell you now I'm all for running away!"

Waitstill's first burst of wretched- ness had subsided and she had recovered her balance. "I'm afraid we must wait a little longer, Patty," she advised. "Don't mention my name to father, but see how he acts in the morning. He was so wild, so unlike himself, that I almost hope he may forget what he said and sleep it off. Yes, we must just wait."

"No doubt he'll be far calmer in the morning if he remembers that, if he turns you out, he faces the prospect of three meals a day cooked by me," said Patty. "That's what he thinks he would face; but, as a matter of fact, I shall tell him that where you sleep I sleep, and where you eat I eat, and when you stop cooking I stop! He won't part with two unpaid servants in a hurry, not at the beginning of haying." And Patty, giving Waitstill a last hug and a dozen tearful kisses, stole reluctantly back to the house by the same route through which she had left it.

Patty was right. She found the fire lighted when she went down into the kitchen next morning, and without a word she hurried breakfast on to the table as fast as she could cook and serve it. Waitstill was safe in the barn chamber, she knew, and would be there quietly while her father was feeding the horse and milking the cows, or perhaps she might go up in the woods and wait until she saw him driving away.

The deacon ate his breakfast in silence, looking and acting very much as usual, for he was generally dumb at meals. When he left the house, how- ever, and climbed into the wagon, he turned around and said in his ordinary gruff manner: "Bring the lunch up to the field yourself today, Patience. Tell your sister I hope she's come to her senses in the course of the night. You've got to learn, both of you, that ten you an that night, that you fort yourself with the thought that he is going to overlook it this time. After I carry up his luncheon I shall stop at the store and ask Cephas to come out on the river bank for a few minutes. Then I shall proceed to say what I think of him for telling father where you went yesterday afternoon."

"Don't blame Cephas!" Waitstill remonstrated. "Can't you see just how it happened? He and Uncle Bart were sitting in front of the shop when I drove by. When father came home and found the house empty and the horse not in the stall, of course he asked where I was, and Cephas probably said he had seen me drive up Saco hill. He had no reason to think that there was any harm in that."

"If he had any sense he might know that he shouldn't tell anything to father except what happens in the store," Patty insisted. "Were you frightened out in the barn alone last night, poor dear?"

"I was too unhappy to think of fear, and I was chiefly nervous about you, all alone in the house with father."

"I didn't like it very much myself. I buttoned my bedroom door and sat by the window all night, shivering and bristling at the least sound. Every- body calls me a coward, but I'm not.

"What does she talk about?" asked Patty.

"Her husband mostly. She is expect- ing him to come back daily. We knew that before, of course, but no one can realize it till they see her setting the table for him and putting a saucer of wild strawberries by his plate, going about the kitchen softly, like a gentle ghost."

Levels of Atlantic and Pacific.

At certain stages of the tide the lev- els of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans at the isthmus of Panama differ mate- rially. At Colon the difference between high and low water is not much more than twenty-three inches, while at Panama it is generally thirteen feet and at times as much as nineteen feet. The current that would be produced by this condition of things in a sea level canal would seriously interfere with navigation, but under the present ar- rangement of a locked canal the diffi- culty is obviated. The Suez canal pre- sented no such difficulty, the difference in tide level at Port Said and Suez be- ing of a trifling nature.—New York American.

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas. The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most depend- able way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

The hot weather is here now and if you want a cool, comfortable kitchen this summer come and select your Gas Range and Water Heater now. We have ranges at all prices.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

RAVAGES OF HESSIAN FLY.

Probably the Most Destructive Insect to Wheat, Rye and Barley.

[Prepared by J. Troop, entomologist Purdue university agricultural experiment station.]

The Hessian fly is probably the most destructive insect to wheat, rye and barley with which the farmer has to contend. It seems to prefer wheat, but it is not uncommon during the seasons when the fly is abundant for a large percentage of the rye and barley crops to be destroyed. Oats are seldom if ever attacked by this fly.

As is well known, the fly usually goes in cycles of three or four years. This is due, partially at least, to the parasites which attack it, so that we usually have about two years of abundance of flies, when the parasites become numerous enough to kill them off, and then there are several seasons when there are comparatively few and the injury is so slight that it is scarcely noticed. During these years the parasites, finding very little upon which to feed, naturally die off, and this gives the few remaining flies an opportunity to breed and increase in numbers without molestation until they finally become numerous again.

Wheat is grown in every county in Indiana. The number of bushels raised in 1911 ranged from 23,000 bushels in Benton, which is a corn county, to 1,031,000 bushels in Posey county, the whole state yielding 34,596,320 bushels. In 1910 the yield was 36,152,022 bushels, or an average of 35,000,000 bushels in round numbers. It is estimated that an average of 10 per cent of the crop is lost annually from the ravages of the fly. This would amount to 3,500,000 bushels, which at 75 cents per bushel would make $2,625,000 as the annual loss to Indiana farmers from this source. It will be more than that this year.

It is safe to say that a large part of this loss could be prevented if farmers would give more attention to a better system of farming. Some of the special crop insects, the onion thrips for example, may be held down by spraying, even where seventy-five or 100 acres are involved, but the Hessian fly is a different proposition and must be outwitted by changing the usual system of raising wheat.

Three things are necessary in waging a successful warfare against the fly, viz—thorough preparation of the soil so as to form the best possible conditions for germination; heavy fertilizing, if the soil is not already in good condition, so as to insure a quick and rapid growth, and late sowing, so as to compel the flies to go elsewhere in order to deposit their eggs.

itudes of from 3,500 to 6,000 feet in northern California, Wyoming, Oregon, Idaho and Washington. Another species that is not known to be poisonous is found in the southern Alleghenies. In the west the plant grows on the moist northern slopes in open woods and about the "balds."

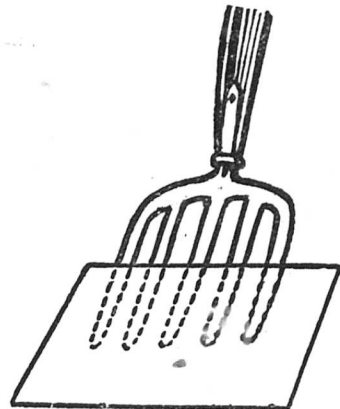

The symptoms of poisoning exhibited by stock are frothing at the mouth, staggering gait, usually more or less paralysis and sometimes difficult breathing and nausea. A considerable quantity of the plant is thought to be necessary to produce dangerous results.

Menziesia is not an appetizing shrub and sheep will not eat it unless there is a lack of good forage. When driven along trails bordered by the plant they are likely to eat it in considerable amounts. When bedding grounds are frequently used the flock may on account of the scarcity of good grazing eat the leaves of the poisonous shrub.

Although some investigative work has been done by the United States department of agriculture, not much is known about the treatment of poisoned stock. A pamphlet containing a description of the plant has been published. The only remedy at present is prevention. Herdsmen should learn to recognize the plant. The leaves are thin, from one to two inches long and from half an inch to an inch wide. The bell shaped flowers vary from pink to greenish white and are quarter of an inch across, growing from terminal buds and expanding with the leaves.—Country Gentleman.

HARVESTING SOY BEANS.

When Grown For Hay They Should Be Cut When Pods Are Forming.

Soy beans grown for hay should be cut when the pods are forming and before the plant begins to drop its leaves. If delayed too long the lower leaves may drop off and thus the most valuable part of the plant be lost. The stems also become woody and consequently less palatable to stock. It is preferable to cut early rather than too late.

The crop may be cut with an ordinary mower. The beans should be cut early in the morning after the dew is off or late in the afternoon. If cut in the morning they may be allowed to wilt until late in the afternoon of the same day and then put up in small cocks. This work is often done by hand, as the leaves fall off readily. A horse rake, however, may be used when the vines are nicely wilted, but not dried. As they shed water quite well in wet weather the small cocks may be left to cure for several days. If the weather is fair the small cocks are turned over before noon and allowed to cure thoroughly. When the weather is unfavorable it is advisable to bunch a number of cocks together, cover with a hay cap and allow to cure for several days. Soy bean hay has high feeding value, about equal to alfalfa if well cured; hence the importance of handling the crop properly so as to retain the leaves.

This, in common with alfalfa, pea, clover and other leguminous hays, should not be put up in unprotected stacks. If necessary to stack cover the top and sides with canvas or boards. The best place to store is in the closed mow or barn. It should be handled as little as possible after curing, for there is danger if handled carelessly of losing the leaves.

Soy beans intended for seed should be allowed to ripen well and may be cut with scythe, mower or bean harrow. Some harvest the crop with

SIBILANTS AND SONG

A Combination That Does Not Produce Satisfactory Results.

"Writing verses for the printed and writing 'words' to be set to music and sung," remarked a gentleman has won laurels in both departments of industry, "are two very different matters. You can take liberties in the first case which you cannot in the second of lyrics," as with these you are to consider the 'singableness' of words used.

"To avoid sibilants like a pestilence and to use open vowels such as A O wherever possible are the two golden rules. English has been called unsingable language, and certain Italian and French are more so and easier to vocalize in. Open vowels are very important. Compare, for instance, the word 'thee,' which breathed out between the teeth, its plural 'you,' which enables the singer to open the mouth widely. relative singableness is apparent once.

"An excessive use of sibilants produces a ludicrous hissing sound. (The last sentence aloud, and note the effect.) BIRDS AND BRAINS.

The Canary Well Supplied, While the Poor Hen is Sadly Lacking.

Naturalists have arrived at the conclusion that the brain in birds is in proportion to the body. If it is admitted that intelligence depends on the weight of the brain then the finch must be placed at the top of the list of birds. The brain weighs fourteenth of its whole body.

It must be remembered, however, that attempts to draw conclusions from the intelligence of certain birds, a comparison of the weight of brain with that of the body have considered futile.

In man the brain forms from twenty-second to one-thirty-third of whole body; in the canary, one-thirtieth; the sparrow, one-twenty-fourth; the chaffinch, one-twenty-seventh; the redstart, one-thirty-second; the b. bird, one-sixty-eighth; the duck, two-hundred-and-fifty-seventh; the g. gl., one-two-hundred-and-sixtieth; the goose, one-three-hundred-and-sixty; the domestic hen, one-four-hundred-and-twelfth.

By some the preternaturally cunning raven is supposed to be the most highly developed of birds. His courage is so great that the eagle respects it, his intelligence prevents him from falling into unseen though suspected traps.—London Spectator.

Three things are necessary in wagsoil so as to form the best possible conditions for germination; heavy fer-

as to compel the flies to go elsewhere in order to deposit their eggs.

BATTLING WITH ARMY WORMS.

The army worm is continuing its campaign of devastation in the eastern states. E. L. D. Seymour makes the following suggestion in the New York Tribune as to methods of fighting this enemy to garden and farm:

Since the advance of a horde of the insects is a remarkable sight it is usually easy to know when they are approaching. Immediately your field, lawn or, if possible, your entire property should be protected against them by the simple expedient of plowing furrows around it, leaving the side toward the advancing worms smooth. Sliding down this, they accumulate in the trench and may be destroyed by dragging a log along the furrow. One enterprising farmer ran his automobile back and forth with two wheels in the ditch and killed them by thousands. Or smooth, straight sided holes may be dug in the furrows twenty feet apart, into which the insects tumble,
to be killed with kerosene, hot water or by crushing.

LIVE STOCK AND DAIRY.

There is nothing better than well cured clover rowen or second growth clover hay, writes J. P. Schureman United States department of agriculture. This should be cut up fine and steamed. Clover is not only highly nitrogenous, but rich in lime, a substance required by the hens for providing shells for the eggs.

Milk producers who know it best concede that alfalfa is an invaluable feed in the dairy, closely akin to wheat bran in results and usually much less expensive. In the average small town or city there is about one cow for every ten or fifteen people. Therefore in a town of 1,000 population there will probably be 75 to 100 cows. If alfalfa will increase the quantity of their milk and butter fat, giving a product at a lower cost than the concentrated foods it should be more used. But as yet it is not generally used, because it is not understood and appreciated.

In order to produce desirable flavor it is very essential that the milk and cream be handled under sanitary conditions.

WAR IS WHAT?

Some Varied Points of View That Reach Far, Far Apart.

The Enlisted Man—A chance to break isolated cases to provide opportunities for military or political advancement.

The Business Man—A period of eco-large failures and the consequent loss of the public's investments.

The Volunteer—A stern patriotic duty to be entered upon without inquiry as to its justice or injustice.

The Philosopher—An unintelligent

The Historian—A logical, if somewhat regrettable, method of arranging the world's boundary lines.

The Optimist—The natural strife of humanity, tending toward the general

The Pessimist—The natural strife of destruction of the universe.

The Mother—A long vigil in an empty

so as to retain the leaves.

This, in common with alfalfa, pea,

the top and sides with canvas or boards. The best place to store is in the closed mow or barn. It should be handled as little as possible after cur-carelessly of losing the leaves.

Soy beans intended for seed should be allowed to ripen well and may be cut with scythe, mower or bean harvester. Some harvest the crop with grain binder and others with corn harvester. Both of these machines, however, shatter the beans and cause considerable loss.

When cut with a mower without windrowing attachment the plants should be removed at every round out of the way of the horses, for if trampled upon a large percentage of the seed will be shelled out and wasted.
After cutting the beans are allowed to cure in windrows or bundles and are hauled in as soon as dry.

Provided the regular grain concaves are removed from the machine and blank concaves used in their place, soy beans may be thrashed without much injury with the ordinary thrasher. The thrasher cylinder should be run at less speed than when thrashing grains, while the separator should be run at the usual rate of speed. To accomplish this a larger drive belt pulley is used and a correspondingly larger pulley on the opposite end of the cylinder.

The beans should be stored in barrels or shallow bins or spread out on a floor, where from time to time they can be shoveled over until they are thoroughly dry and hard. Later they may be safely stored more compactly.

The dry beans will keep nicely for several years when not exposed to the elements. They can be fed whole to pigs and sheep, but for general use it is preferable to crack or grind them.

Tests have shown that it is often necessary to mix the beans with corn or peas to grind them into meal, as the beans are too soft to granulate well alone. Too large quantities should not be ground at a time, as the high oil content will cause the meal to heat and turn rancid, making it unfit for feed.

Summer Spoilage of Eggs.

Why work and worry raising chicks, feed them all winter and then let half the eggs spoil during the hot summer months? Last year in the warmer portions of the country almost half the eggs leaving the farm were unfit for food. This was in addition to the large item of the eggs lost and spoiled outright by the hens laying in the weeds and grass and in inaccessible places.

Chanticleer is responsible for a large percentage of this loss. Fertile eggs begin to incubate at once in hot weather, and the loss in spoiled eggs can be reduced at least 75 per cent by promptly getting rid of the roosters as soon as hatching eggs are no longer wanted.

COMFORTABLE FEET.

Care of the Nails an Important Factor in Securing This Result.

If your ankles are inclined to be thick wear perfectly plain stockings without ribs or ornamentation of any kind. Keep to black stockings too. Never wear gray or tan ones. These will only serve to increase their apparent size.

Ingrowing toenails are a frequent trouble with those who do not know how to take proper care of their feet. Sometimes also the ingrowing toenails are caused by wearing tight pointed shoes. Never cut toenails to a curve at the edges as you do your finger nails. They should be cut perfectly straight. Should the nail begin to show a tendency to grow into the flesh at the corners of the toe make a V shaped incision in the center of the toenail at the top. Gradually the nail will grow from each side until it closes together again at the gap, thus effectively checking the ingrowing tendency at the sides. A good plan, too, is to insert just a long piece of cotton wool between the toenail and the toe at each corner.

Culinary Notes

Putting Up Rhubarb.

The end of the season rhubarb may be preserved for winter pies without being cooked at all. It will retain its freshness until the new supply comes on in the spring.

The rhubarb should be cut into three-quarter inch pieces and put into quart jars. When the jars are full water from the cold water faucet should be run into them until all the air is forced out. After all the air bubbles have come to the top the mouth of the jars should be wiped dry and the covers screwed on with a can tightener. The jars should be kept standing in a cool place and the covers tightened each day. They should then be wrapped in paper and put in a dark closet not too near the heating pipes.

To make pies the water should be drained off and the same amount of sugar used as for fresh fruit. If the cans have been tight the fruit will be hard and solid.

Cantaloupe Pickle.

Firm, hard fruit should be selected for cantaloupe pickle, which is very good and very inexpensive. The fruit should be cut along the ridges and peeled. The softest part of the inside and the seeds should be cut out and the sections put into a quart jar lengthwise. The jars should be steamed in a steamer until they are hot, but before the fruit is cooked they should be taken out and filled with a hot sirup made of two pounds of sugar and one quart of vinegar to each four quarts of fruit. The spices—cloves, stick cinnamon and allspice—should be tied up in a piece of cheesecloth before being put in the jars.

Jars, covers and sirup should all be very hot before they are closed and should be sealed very tight. The pickle may be served with meat.

GARLIC FOR FLAVORING.

In the Hands of an Experienced Cook It Achieves Wonders.

The indescribable flavors of some dishes served in French and Italian cooking are often due to the soupcon of garlic used by the chef. A soupcon—just a hint or an expression; that is it—and you have learned the art of employing garlic in your savory productions.

In the hands of an experienced cook, without doubt, garlic is a decided asset of value in the kitchen, for its intangible savor lends an air of distinction to most dishes of fish, flesh and fowl. A properly made salad in which there is a lingering, evasive suspicion of garlic left on the sides of the bowl is far superior to the plain or the onion flavored dish of green stuff.

A steak which is lightly touched once, and only once, mind, with the clove, all over the lean, bone and fat, will be found excellent when served with maitre d'hotel butter after a short, sharp grilling on a bright, clear fire.

Poultry will be found good if smeared lightly with garlic before roasting, while the ordinary joint of meat can be transformed into a decidedly toothsome dish with the aid of just the soupcon.

A Home Industry.

An ear of sweet corn on the average dining car and hotel a la carte service costs 25 cents. Considering this, canning corn on the cob for the market might prove a very profitable investment for a thrifty housekeeper and bring to her considerable pin money.

One advantage of sweet corn canned on the cob over other canned corn is that all the best food values are kept with the cob. In cutting corn off, the germ quality of the kernel, which keeps up its standard, is usually lost. This germ quality is the part of the corn that is sought by rats and mice when they look for food in the corn bin and is the most vital part. Much of the corn is also rendered mushy when it is cut from the cob.

Renewing a Straw Hat.

To renew a black straw hat sponge with alcohol and then brush it with a thin solution of gum arabic, which gives a varnished finish as well as a slight stiffness. If the straw is very dingy use a good black ink or a liquid shoe dressing before applying the gum arabic.

Dinner Introductions.

At a small dinner party the hostess should introduce all guests. At a large affair it is only necessary to introduce those who go in together to the table.

Nuts as Food.

A judicious use of nuts has cured cases of indigestion by relieving the constipation which was the cause. Brazil and pine kernels particularly are rich in natural oil which gives warmth, keeps the digestive system clear and does much toward making the skin clear and healthy. Weight for weight nuts contain actually far more protein than bread. They are a safe food for all who have a tendency toward any form of rheumatism, and they are also beneficial in cases of mental strain and general "nerves."

Delicious Tomato Sandwich.

Sandwiches will, with the opening of school, be in demand for the children's luncheon.

The tomato sandwich is piquant and appetizing.

Select large, smooth, meaty tomatoes, with few seeds. Slice very thin and place on ice while the other ingredients are being prepared. Mix together with a silver spoon till thick and creamy one tablespoonful of olive oil, a quarter teaspoonful of finely minced clove of garlic, two tablespoonfuls of thick sour cream, the yolk of one hard boiled egg, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of black pepper. Cut white bread thin, leaving the crust on; spread with the dressing and place the cold tomatoes between the slices.

A Popular Jelly.

When crab apples can be had for the picking the housekeeper should put up lots of jelly. The proportions are four pounds of fruit to three pounds of sugar. The method is as follows:

Wash the apples and cut away decayed parts. Put into a vessel with water, cover and boil until the fruit is soft. The skin and cores can then be easily removed. Strain the water the apples have been cooked in through a jelly bag and put aside.

Dissolve the right quantity of sugar in the water set aside in the proportions of one pint to three pounds of sugar. Set the preserving pan over the stove and when the contents boil drop in the apples. Boil until clear and then put into jars.

Fried Vegetables.

The flavor of fried vegetables is much more delicate than that of raw. To prepare them heat two tablespoonfuls of butter for one pint of vegetables cut in cubes. Stir together over the fire until hot, then set where they will cook slowly for one-half hour, stirring often. Place on the hot part of the stove and cook for a few minutes longer. Drain butter and add vegetables to the dish they are to flavor. The herbs most frequently used for seasoning are parsley, chervil, chives, thyme, sage, summer savory and bay leaf. Wash well, place on a clean board and mince fine with a knife. Add to soups or sauces just before serving.

Dainty Dessert.

An excellent dessert may be made from a pound of marshmallows, each cube cut in four pieces, and added to a fifteen cent bottle of maraschino cherries, drained and with each cherry cut in half. A teacupful of chopped nuts, a half pint of cream whipped stiff and two tablespoonfuls of sherry complete the dessert.

The ingredients should be stirred together and put in the icebox for three hours to give the marshmallow a chance to dissolve. It should be served with sponge cake or lady fingers.

or the onion flavored dish or green stuff.

A steak which is lightly touched once, and only once, mind, with the clove, all over the lean, bone and fat, will be found excellent when served with maitre d'hotel butter after a short, sharp grilling on a bright, clear fire.

Poultry will be found good if smeared lightly with garlic before roasting, while the ordinary joint of meat can be transformed into a decidedly toothsome dish with the aid of just the soupçon.

Tastelessness in cookery may become a thing of the past when garlic has acquired a more universal use in the hands of the wise.

Couched Shadow Work.

The couched shadow work is among the new things in embroidery. It is very simply done, but is not quick work. In this new adaptation of couching the background is embroidered and the pattern left in the material with just enough embroidery stitches to give it form. A couching cord is used for the work. This cord is really just a padding. It is basted in rows across the entire surface by a short stitch on top and a long one underneath. After the cord is basted the background is worked with a twisted cotton of any desired color. The rows of cord are then covered with satin stitch, the stitches taken at right angles to the cord. While the stitches are not packed tightly together, yet they completely cover the cord. The stitches of one row are interlocked with those of the next, so that there will be no break between the rows of cord. After the background is embroidered the design is outlined and the couching cord, which shows, is held in place by a couching stitch.

Emergency Table.

An emergency table in a sickroom can easily be arranged where there is a sewing machine that has a drop head. Open the machine and push the leaf over the bed and it serves as a convenient table for the person therein. A square of rubber cloth under a white cover will protect the wood from hot dishes or glasses and make it look attractive.

A Sanitary Precaution.

Household galvanized ware, such as coal buckets, trash and garbage cans, freezer buckets and ice pans, should be boiled out once a week with any of the good washing powders and water, not only as a sanitary precaution, but as a means to add to the length of their usefulness.

Corner Shelves.

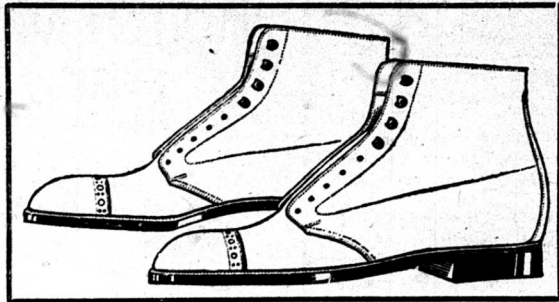

There is nothing so convenient as an extra shelf in an unused corner. The possibilities in a shelf are great, whether it be built in the kitchen, the cellar or the best bedroom, nor is its usefulness its only virtue. It may also be made ornamental by suitable draperies and a mirror above it.

Daytime Face Cleaning.

The daytime cleansing of the face is accomplished with a massage with cold cream or some lotion, this followed by a rub with a soft clean cloth and the application of some delicate toilet water made warm.

Mr. Kenneth Cambridge met with what might have been a fatal accident during the fire in Cambridge's bakery on Friday night last. The electric light, used to light the oven, had been knocked down to the floor and by some means became lighted. Mr. Cambridge stopped to pick it up out of the water on the floor when he received a shock which knocked him flat in the water. However, he recovered in a short time after being taken out of his uncomfortable position.

Very Close Call.

About one of the narrowest escapes from meeting a horrible death, by fire, befell Mr. and Mrs. Albert McCartney early on Monday morning, at their home, three miles north-west of Odesa, as they both were asleep and their house was in flames. Whatever was the cause of the fire no one seems to know. The flames spread so rapidly that all the household effects and dwelling were reduced to ashes in a short time. It was nothing more than an act of Providence that the couple were awakened by something falling after the fire had made some headway. It was then necessary for Mr. and Mrs. McCartney to escape by going out of the upstairs window. Some of the neighbors were notified to give assistance in extinguishing the flames, but a strong wind blowing, it was a hopeless task. The fire was, however, kept from spreading to the adjacent barns and thereby lessening the loss of property which seemed almost doomed to destruction.

OBITUARY.

Sarah Eliza Hudgins, wife of James Hudgins, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Frisken, on the evening of Oct. 6th. She had been visiting her daughter for the past few weeks, her home being with her son, John E. Hudgins, of Selby. She was in usual health until about one half hour before she died. She called her daughter to her telling her she could not get her breath, but that she had no pain. She was conscious to the last and realized the end was near. She was born in the Township of Richmond in 1846, was united in marriage to James Hudgins, of Selby, where they lived many happy years together until death called him home to his reward in the year 1894. They were interested members of the Methodist church. Quite early in life death entered their home and they had to part with their little son, and through his death they were both led to consecrate themselves to God, and the family altar was established. Of late years she was unable to attend public service but she frequently expressed her strong faith in God and her Christian courage and steadfastness, accompanying the natural cheerfulness that so strongly characterized her nature made it ever refreshing to meet her. She leaves to mourn one brother, James Jaynes, of Adolphustown, three daughters and two sons; Mrs. A. C. Asselstine, Sunnyside, Wash., Mrs. E. L. Mans, of Grandview, Wash., also Mrs. John Frisken, of Selby, Mr. Wm. Hudgins, of Haliburton, and J. E. Hudgins, of Selby. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Cook, in the Methodist Church Selby, interment at River-view Cemetery, Napanee.
